The Illinois Miners' Struggle

Crash in the Stock Market

Not all of the soothing assurances of Herbert Hoover and the other spokesman of the ruling class can conceal the fact that the stock market crash was a sharp blow to American capitalist stability, that revealed the anarchy and weakness of the industrial and financial structure of the present system. The heavily inflated stock market, the accumulation of the growth since America's entry into the World War, burst like a punctured windbag.

The Causes of Crash

The Wall Street crash was not due solely to the speculative mania, which only aggravated the situation. Its roots go deeper. Since the end of the World War, the United States became the world's banker. "Easy money" made possible an embarkment on a road of production increase such as has not had its parallel in history, accompanied by an unprecedented export of capital.

The tremendous productive capacity and output of American industry did not, however, entirely correspond with the growth of the American home market. At the same time, with the world market growing narrower, European economy, rehabilitated largely by American dollars, continued to hammer at the doors of the American market with a demand for entry.

The world and its markets, however, have certain physical limitations. The struggle for this market becomes keener every day. American capitalism must have an ever-increasing share of this market commensurate with its top-heavy industrial structure. It must either go forward—which means the inevitable armed conflict primarily with England for a new division of the world market, or else it must vomit up the indigestible over-capitalization of its industry induced by frenzied speculation and investment. This is what happened.

It does not follow, of course, that the collapse on the stock exchange is to be followed immediately by a collapse of American industry. The ups and downs of stock market speculations do not directly reflect the conditions of industry, where money changes hands—under "bull" or "bear" influences—without producing anything or, frequently affecting values. It has been evident for months that American industry has entered a stage of depression in some of its most important branches.

Where the U. S. Will Press

But the United States is still in a sufficiently strong and arrogant position in world economy and politics to endeavor to overcome its economic difficulties at home by pressure on two points: on the U. S. workers in the form of a more intense drive to lower wages, lengthen the work day, speed up the workers, and on Europe, in the form of a decreased ration for France, Germany, Italy, England and the rest of the world market.

From both of these points, United States capitalism will meet with increased resistance. The attempt to issue out of its own difficulties at the expense of the American workers, and particularly of European capitalism, will involve it in the most violent collisions. The American worker, accustomed to a relatively high standard of living, will fight, if not to raise it, at least to retain it. The European countries especially England, will be pushed by the force of events to fight back, at first around "peaceful" conference tables and in the end on the battlefield of imperialist war.

The factors making for war are already present in embryo. They are maturing rapidly. The crash on the stock market is a harbinger of the coming catastrophe.

Trotsky Greet the Weekly Militant

Dear Comrades:

You cannot, in my opinion, better mark the Twelfth Anniversary of the October Revolution than by transforming The Militant into a weekly. It is a great step forward. A semi-monthly gave the possibility of assembling the first cadres of the faction. The weekly creates the possibility of direct and permanent intervention in the life of the whole working class.

The weekly, in turn will have to prepare the road to the Daily. But isn't it Utopian to speak of it now? I do not think so. For it is in this direction that the road of development is leading.

In the U. S. S. R., in Germany, in France, the Left Communist Opposition represents a faction that is fighting for influence upon the proletarian nucleus of the official Party. In Belgium, the situation is quite different. The official Party there is entirely insignificant. Well, the Belgian Opposition can and must lead to the role of an independent Party. Upon it devolves the task of fighting for the proletarian nucleus not of the Communist Party but of the Social Democratic Party.

In America, the situation is closer to that in Belgium than to that in Germany. The essential task of the American Communists consists of direct action upon the revolutionary elements of the class; the struggle for the workers who belong to the official Party or who are misled into the Right Wing not having a great importance. That means that the Communist League in America has all the necessary elements for developing into an independent Party. And if such is the case, the weekly can and must become a stage on the road towards a daily.

I am sending you for the first number of the Weekly my article on the Twelfth Anniversary of the October Revolution, and at the same time my promise of the most active collaboration and the assurance of my devoted support.

The Conference at Belleville

By Joseph Angelo

The news as reported in the Daily Worker on the Belleville convention of the Illinois National Miners Union is just as far from the truth as that carried in the capitalist press. What the convention was in actuality will be given here.

A Convention of Speeches

The first day of the convention (Saturday) began with speech making and ended with speech making. First Voyzey spoke, then Corbushley, then, following one one after the other, Boyce of Indiana, Guynn of Ohio, Kelley from Chicago on the I. L. D. (Kelley is a new one to me, looks more like a business man than a worker—a typical Babbitt), and Allard. Thus the first day of the convention ended with six Communist speakers and after adjournment the rank and file delegates stood outside the convention hall, some with stoical faces and others full of resentment. The miners of Illinois are in revolt. They have had enough of speech making at home. They came to Belleville to help outline a plan of action to build the National Miners Union, to fight the coal operators and their henchmen, the Fishwicks and Lewises, but not to listen to a lot of gibberish from second-hand peddlers. So the first day of the convention created a smoldering volcano.

When I came into the convention hall for the second and last day of the convention (Sunday) my first impression was that I was either in Chicago or New York attending a Communist Party affair. There they were with their important looking brief cases Sklar, Tashinsky, Gebert, Bental, the great zig-zag Foster, the Toohey, Prokoff (another Party official in Illinois) and others whose names I don't know nor did I care to find out. Evidently this crew of Stalinites were delayed for some reason or other, therefore all the speechmaking and no action on Saturday.

The second day session came to order with Corbushley reading off a list of names that he said were selected by a small committee for the various committees, the resolution, constitutional, finance, credential and wages and demands committees. Corbushley asked for the adoption of his report. The report was amended by the convention adding a rank and file delegate here and there to the various committees. When we got to the wage and demands committee, I placed the name of John Watt in nomination: Immediately the Stalinites present began to protest. Their argument was that the national office should not interfere in district affairs—this from Slinger and Allard. Then I raised the question of Freeman Thompson who is a National Board member and whose name was selected by the small committee for the wage and demands committee. The Stalinites realizing that they had made a mistake in their work moved that all national officials act as an advisory committee in all committees.

After this Toohey took the floor for one of his long-winded speeches which took over two hours, criticizing John Watt for his so-called "operators' neutrality" theory (which is bunk). Toohey ended his long tirade with a resolution on policy, wage and demands and asked for the adoption of the resolution. Immediately, Voyzey put the motion for adoption before the house and the motion was accepted without discussion of any kind from any delegates. Before the delegates knew what happened the resolution had been adopted. Shades

The N. Y. Vote - A Warning Sign

The vote in the New York municipal elections was not surprising or noteworthy by the fact that the loyal son of Tammany, James Walker, was re-elected to the Office of mayor with an overwhelming vote, or that the prize demagogue of the Republican (and yesterday of the Socialist) Party, LaGuardia was so heavily snowed under. That was to be expected. What does come as a humiliating blow is the unusually low vote of the official Communist Party. To find a figure that will match the vote received by Weinstone, the C. P. candidate for mayor, one must go back more than five years, and even then a comparison is difficult.

Weinstone, standard bearer of the Party, received 5622 votes throughout the city. This stands in sharp contrast not only to the 174,391 votes received by the Socialist candidate, Thomas, or the so-called "straight Socialist" vote for Solomon for Comptroller, but also to the 6,692 votes polled by Olive Johnson, candidate for the Socialist Labor Party. Even the mountebank Enright, with his "Square Deal Party" got 334 more votes than Weinstone.

This terrific defeat for the Communist Party must be examined in the light of the following facts: There is an increasingly radical sentiment among the workers, and this militant mood has been played up and exaggerated enormously by the Daily Worker and the rest of the Party press. For weeks before the election, the Daily Worker shouted itself hoarse with the boast that the workers are ready for Communist Party leadership, that they are leaving their betrayers in the unions and flocking to the revolutionary trade union center, the T. U. U. L., that the Communist campaign is to be waged fearlessly in the name of "class against class".

In the face of all this rapid prattling, the elections showed that the Communist Party received a smaller vote—for the first time in many years—than the anemic and hopelessly sectarian Socialist Labor Party, which has no influence upon the American working class and pretends to none!

The course of the Communist Party is very instructive: In 1924, Foster received 4389 votes in New York City in his Presidential run and Johns of the S. L. P. 2226; Cannon, running for Governor, got 7,813 votes with the S. L. P. candidate running up 4,923. In the election for Governor in 1926, after the Lovestone wrecking crew had taken over the Party, Gitlow received 4,425, with Crowley of the S. L. P. getting 1,957. In 1928, Foster running for President, got 9,214 votes, and Reynolds for the S. L. P., 2,769. For Governor, William F. Dunne (C. P.) got 9,058 and Carreagan (S. L. P.) 2,725. Not once did the S. L. P. come within a thousand votes of the C. P. This year, under the new leadership and the new line, Weinstone lost 3,436 votes compared with Dunne's vote last year, while Johnson, of the S. L. P., gained 3,877 votes over last year's S. L. P. candidate.

Elections are not decisive for the working class struggle; they are only barometers of the sentiment of the masses. As a barometer of the Communist Party strength, this year's vote indicates a pitiful weakness and is a crushing blow to all the bombast, fakery, exaggeration and direct falsification with which the present Party apparatus men feed the remnants of the Party membership.

Why the Falling Vote?

The New York vote is a warning signal to the membership of the Party. The efforts of the Daily Worker to conceal the shameful defeat with outrageously false headlines about the "doubled vote of the C. P." will only serve to deepen the crisis in the Party instead of creating the enlightenment necessary to overcome it.

As for the Socialist Party, it has no special cause for jubilation. In the percentage of total votes, Thomas received less than Hillquit did in 1917, despite the fact that Thomas' campaign was as fearfully "respectable" and as far removed from socialism as that of any liberal reformer. The deeply mired S. P. was dragged a yard further down into the swamp of capitalist degeneration by this year's campaign.

The post election "heated" discussion between Hillquit and Thomas shows where the S. P. is going. It is not a Party of the working class and does not want to be one. It yearns for the "classless" liberal and the dignity of the peanut-stand owner's adherence. The workers who follow Thomas and his Party will serve as vote contributors and nothing more. Unfortunately, the Socialist Party will continue to get working class votes also, so long as the Communist Party continues its ruinous polit-

What's Happening in China?

A Question That Every Communist Must Ask Himself and Answer

Among the telegrams of Pravda there has been communicated many times during October in the smallest type that an armed Communist detachment under the command of comrade Tchou-Deh (Kwantung), that this detachment has increased from 5,000 to 20,000, etc. Thus we learn, "in passing", from the laconic telegrams of Pravda that the Chinese Communists are conducting an armed struggle against Chiang Kai-Shek. What is the meaning of this struggle? Its origin? Its perspectives? Not a word is breathed to us about it. If the new revolution in China has matured to the point where the Communists are taking arms, then one would think that it is necessary to mobilize the International in the face of events of a decisive historical importance. Why then do we hear nothing of the sort? And if the situation in China is not such as puts on the order of the day the armed struggle of the Communists for power, then how and why has a Communist detachment begun an armed struggle against Chiang Kai-Shek, that is, against the bourgeois military dictatorship?

Yes, why have the Chinese Communists risen in rebellion? Perhaps because the Chinese proletariat has already found the time to heal its wounds? Because the demoralized and feeble Communist Party has found the time to stand erect again thanks to the new revolutionary wave? Have the city workers assured their contact with the revolutionary masses of the country? Have strikes spread throughout the country? Has the general strike pushed the proletariat to the insurrection? If such is the case, then everything is in order. But then why does Pravda communicate this fact in type used for small announcements?

Zinoviev's Analogy

Or perhaps the Chinese Communists have risen in rebellion because they have received the latest comments of Molotov on the resolution on the Third Period? It is no accident that Zinoviev who, in distinction to the other capitulators, still pretends to be alive, has made a sortie in Pravda with an article which shows that the domination of Chiang Kai-Shek is entirely similar to the temporary domination of Koltchak, that is, only a simple episode in the process of the revolutionary drive. This analogy is naturally quite fit to reward the soul a little. Unfortunately, it is not only false, but even stupid. Koltchak organized an insurrection in one province against the dictatorship of the proletariat already established in the greater part of the country. In China, bourgeois counter-revolution rules in the country and it is the Communists who have stirred up an insurrection of a few thousand people in one of the provinces. We think, therefore, we have the right to pose this question: does this insurrection spring from the situation in China or rather from the directions concerning the Third Period? We ask what is the political role of the Chinese Communist Party in all this? What are the slogans with which it mobilized the masses? What is the degree of its influence upon the workers? We hear nothing of all this. The rebellion of Tchou-Deh appears to be a reproduction of the adventurist campaigns of Ho-Lun and Ye-Tin in 1927 and the uprisings in Canton timed for the moment of the expulsion of the Opposition from the Russian Communist Party.

Or perhaps the rebellion was let loose spontaneously? Well and good. But then what is the meaning of the Communist banner unfurled above it? What is the attitude of the official Chinese Communist Party towards the insurrection? What is the position of the Comintern in this question? And why, finally, in communicating this fact to us, does the Moscow Pravda abstain from any comment?

But there is still another explanation possible, which is perhaps at the same time the most disquieting: Have the Chinese Communists risen in rebellion because of Chiang Kai-Shek's seizure of the Chinese Eastern Railway? Has this insurrection, wholly guerrilla in character, as its only aim to cause Chiang Kai-Shek the greatest possible uneasiness at his rear? If that is what it is, we ask who has given such counsel to the Chinese Communists? Who bears the political responsibility for their passing over to guerrilla fighting?

It is not long ago that we decisively condemned the ramblings on the necessity of handing over so important an instrument as the Chinese Eastern from the hands of the Russian revolution to those of the Chinese counter-revolution. We called to mind the elementary duty of the international proletariat in this conflict to defend the Republic of the Soviets against the Chinese bourgeoisie and all its possible instigators and allies. But, on the other hand, it is quite clear that the proletariat of the U. S. A., which has the power and the army in its hands, cannot demand that the vanguard of the Chinese proletariat begin a war at once against Chiang Kai-Shek, that is, that it apply the means which the Soviet government itself does not find it possible, and with reason, to apply. Had a war begun between the U. S. S. R., and China, or rather, between the U. S. S. R. and the imperialist protectors of China, the duty of the Chinese Communist would be to transform this war in the shortest time into a civil war. But even in that case the launching of the civil war would have to be subordinated to general revolutionary policy; and even then the Chinese Communists would be unable to pass over arbitrarily, and at any moment at all, to the road of open insurrection, but only after having assured themselves of the necessary support of the worker and peasant masses. The rebellion at Chiang-Kai-Shek's rear, in this situation, would be the extension of the front of the workers and peasants of the Soviets; the fate of the insurgent Chinese workers would be intimately bound up with the fate of the Soviet Republic; the tasks, the aim, the perspectives would be quite clear.

The Perspective of the Adventure

But what is the perspective opened up by this uprising of the today isolated Chinese Communists in the absence of the war

Schlesinger Prepares His Dress Strike

While Foster Almost Changes the Line—with the Help of a Cable from Losovsky

A classic example of how the American labor bureaucracy, even its so-called socialist wing, conducts the struggle for the "improvement" of the conditions of the workers is afforded by the present campaign of Schlesinger, Dubinsky and their colleagues to organize the dressmakers of New York into the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. The New York Times reports on the negotiations between the union officials and the various bosses' associations read like reports of two boards of directors in different branches of an industry meeting in conference to settle minor questions of dispute for the purpose of improving the productivity and profits of business. Here is a typical news report from the Times (November 15, 1929) which speaks "volumously" for the level to which the "socialist" leaders of the I. L. G. W. U. have sunk:

"Asserting that the general strike of all dressmakers in the city appeared inevitable as a means of forcing non-union shops to join the respective employers' associations (!) in the industry, Benjamin Schlesinger, president of the I. L. G. W. U. who headed the union contingent at the conferences, appealed to the employers to embrace the union's program and 'do for the dress what has so successfully been accomplished for the cloak trade' . . . The result of both conferences was an agreement by the employers to follow the example of the 'inside' manufacturers and participate in the appointment of joint sub-committees of representatives of employers and the union to work out basic agreements which would serve as a foundation for reorganization of the industry when the strike is called."

The Class Struggle is Over!

The labor leaders of our new era have abolished the very annoying business of class struggle and wiped out the clash of interests between the slave of the needle and the master. In its place they have substituted a miraculous brotherly love and a peace that passeth all understanding. All the troubles of the dressmakers are now to disappear with a wave of Schlesinger's magic wand. The workers will carry on a bitter struggle—to force all bosses to join the bosses' associations. The employers will agree to carry on a similar struggle to have the workers join the Right wing union. And why not? The bosses know that as long as the Schlesingers are running the union they have nothing to fear from the "union shop". Schlesinger will see to it that the dressmakers get what "has so successfully been accomplished for the cloak trade". And what has been done there, as every cloakmaker knows, is the legalization by the union of sweat-and the revolution? The perspective of a terrific debacle and of an adventurist degeneration of the remains of the Communist Party.

In the meantime, it must be said openly. Calculations based upon guerrilla adventure correspond entirely to the general nature of Stalinist policy. Two years ago, Stalin expected gigantic gains for the security of the Soviet State from the alliance with the imperialists of the General Council of the British trade unions. Today he is quite capable of calculating that a rebellion of the Chinese Communists, even without any hope, would bring some "profit" in a precarious situation. In the first case, the calculation was grossly opportunist, in the second, openly adventurist, but in both cases the calculation is made independent of the general tasks of the world labor movement, against these tasks and to the detriment of the correctly understood interests of the Soviet Republic.

We have not at our disposal all the necessary data for a definite conclusion. That is why we ask: What is happening in China? Let it be explained to us! The Communist who does not pose this question to himself and to the leadership of his Party will be unworthy of the name of Communist. The leadership that would like to remain discreetly on the side in order, in case of a defeat of the Chinese guerrilla, to wash its hands and transfer responsibility to the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party—such a leadership would dishonor itself—not for the first time, it is true—by the most abominable crime against the interests of the international revolution.

We ask: What is happening in China? We will continue to pose this question as long as we will not have forced a reply.

A NEW ADDRESS

All comrades and friends are requested to note our change of address. All letters for The Militant or the Communist League or any of the officers of the organization and the paper should from now on be sent to our new address:

The Militant

menous harm to the Left wing in the needle trades market. It was met with distrustful silence by the Left wing rank and file. Now comes the Daily Worker of Nov. 21, 1929,—five weeks later—and in its leading editorial it denounces the previous decision, as per Losovsky's latest cable! Says the Foster-Bedacht-Wicks organ:

Yesterday's Wisdom Now a Trap

"Neither can we consider as anything but a tumble into the trap set by the bosses and their agents such statements as 'remain at work' or the still worse elaboration of this statement into 'stay on the job in the shops we control'—statements made by some (!) left wing comrades. . . . The leadership (of the Left wing union) should undertake at once the organization of rank and file committees composed of members of the I. L. G. W. U., of unorganized workers and of members of the revolutionary union."

This belated bit of "criticism" fails to point out that it was not "some left wing comrades" who advocated the "remain at work" policy, but the official leaders of the union, the expelled Lovestonite Zimmerman as well as the stamped and approved Stalinites Gold, Wortis, and Burochovitch. That this policy was formulated by the official leadership of the Party and put through in the Joint Board by one Party fraction. That this policy was given the seal of approval by an official organ of the Party, the Morning Freiheit. That five weeks passed without anyone but The Militant as much as whispering a word of criticism. That Foster, Browder and Co. were so busy denouncing the "counter-revolutionary Trotskyites" for our position on the Party's line that they could not see daylight until Losovsky jerked them up a bit.

However, the policy now adopted is a step forward. That the cable-suspended Party leaders will be unable to make any genuine progress in the dressmakers' situation, if they continue with their "new line", is nevertheless also true. Foster's substitute for the previous policy of capitulation and passivity, is to enter the Left wing union in an adventurist race with the Right wing as to who will be first to issue the strike call leaflet. What is needed, badly needed at the present moment is a genuine movement for a united front of the workers in the dress trade, a closing of the ranks, a fraternization of the Right wing and Left wing workers for a shoulder-to-shoulder organizing campaign and strike against the bosses and their agents in the ranks of labor, for the unionization of the industry and the improvement of the workers' lot.

The present policy of the Party bureaucrats rules such a line of action out of consideration. The Left wing workers must fight for it in spite of the bureaucratic conditions because that is the way the Schlesingers will be smashed, the Left wing bettered, the workers' conditions bettered. Foster's policy has led to the weakening of the Left wing and the strengthening of the Right wing union. Scores of Left wing workers are registering with the Schlesinger's Right wing union. Well known officials are doing likewise. There is Tunick of Local 6 (a Party member); Martin Feldman, delegate to the Joint Board from local 6 and member of the T. U. E. L.; Faber, former business agent of Local 22; Goldstein, another business agent of Local 22; Horowitz, manager of Cutters Local 6 (ex-Party member); Reichel, Executive Board of Local 6 (a leader of the Party fraction); Sam Weisdorf, Local 2 (Party member); and these are only a few.

Unless the Left wing makes the necessary turn in the right direction, these signs of disintegration will multiply and willy-nilly it will add fuel to a fire that warms hearts only of Schlesinger and the boss' associations.

An entertainment and dance for the benefit of the MILITANT will be held Saturday, December 14th 1929 at 8 P. M. at the Hungarian Hall, 323 East 79th Street, New York City. The affair is under the auspices of the New York Branch of the Communist League of America (Opposition).

The Czecho-Slovakian Elections

BULLETIN

The latest information on the Czech elections bears out the letter of comrade Lenorovics. The Communist Party suffered a crushing defeat, the Agrarians and the Social Democrats made huge strides forward. The Czecho-Slovakian Social Democratic Party increased its vote from 631,000 to 963,000 (more than 50 per cent) and its mandates from 29 to 39. The German Social Democratic Party of Czecho-Slovakia increased about 25 per cent, from 411,000 to 506,000 and its mandates from 17 to 21. The Communist Party dropped from 933,000 to 752,000 and its mandates from 41 to 29. The Czech Agrarians rose from 970,000 to 1,100,000 and are now the strongest Party. The C. P. lost its position as the strongest of the workers' Parties. The Czech S. P. is now the 2nd strongest Party in the country instead of the 4th. The German S. P. becomes the strongest German Party in Czecho-Slovakia. The bourgeois bloc government, consisting of 5 Czech and 3 German Parties, which ruled for over three years with 157 mandates out of 300, now has between 143 and 144, or a minority, and as comrade Lenorovics points out, will probably have to call into the coalition other parties, the Social Democrats most likely.—Ed.

The election comes this time in an unexpected manner. By a combination of technical maneuvers the bourgeoisie is endeavoring to make a success. The military festival of St. Wenceslas and the coincidence of the election day with that of the birthday of the Republic are to contribute to strengthening of national illusions and to make them serve for the elections. For the bourgeoisie, the great chronic crisis of the proletarian Party is also a circumstance that has its importance.

Finance capital has worked well in the course of the past years. Large sections of the petty bourgeoisie (small peasants, small tradesmen, half-proletarian employees) have been proletarianized, and increased exploitation of the working masses is being carried out. The discontent of the workers is still restrained, but it is constantly rising. The objective conditions are favorable to Communism.

In 1925, the Communist Party got close to a million votes. At that time, seven million voters went to the ballot box. This time there will be about 300,000 more voters. But if the Communist Party gets the same number of votes as in 1925, it will be a setback for it, for in that case the Communist Party would not have an increase to register to correspond to the growth of the voters and the "radicalization" of the masses. It is also proper to point out that the number of votes in itself is not a decisive sign of the strength of the Party—it is only a criterion. At the end of 1928, for example, the Communist Party went through a profound crisis; it was incapable of any action; it received nevertheless more than 800,000 votes.

The Left Opposition has no illusions: The elections will be a defeat for the Party. In spite of the favorable objective conditions for Communism. The socialist parties will gain votes in a high proportion. This fact is all the more grave because one of the Socialist Parties of Czecho-Slovakia, the Social Democratic Party, was near to crumbling a few years ago. Now, significantly enough, this same Party has just held its election meeting in the largest hall in Prague, the Lucerna. At this meeting, the former king's minister, Vandervele, delivered a long speech, and, naturally, it was nothing but a lengthy, disgraceful diatribe against Communism and the Soviet Union. The social democrats who formerly held their meetings in the small halls on the outskirts can now speak to large masses, while the Communists must be content with a small hall in the Smichov quarter. This at a time when favorable conditions exist for Communist agitation and propaganda.

Reformist illusions are reviving. This fact is all the more humiliating because it must be noted at a moment when the leadership of the Communist Party is pursuing a self-styled Left policy. But the essentially Centrist character of the leadership can only compromise any real Left policy, because many workers who take the half-measures and the zig-zags for a "Left" policy are disconcerted by the inevitable opportunist effects and become distrustful.

To unmask the Centrist Gottwald-Remann leadership is the most pressing task for us, for these Centrists are barring the road to impelling the masses toward Communism.

The repression that the bourgeois coalition has not ceased to exercise is now becoming strengthened. Military expenditures are increasing. It can nevertheless be expected that on the morrow of the elections the social democrats will form an open coalition with the bourgeoisie. The Czecho-Slovak proletariat (out of 7,000,000 voters a good half of proletarians can be counted) wants socialism, but the Party capable of guiding it is wanting.

The bourgeoisie in power has created a strengthened regime of dictatorship, remarkably organized in every field. It is by this means that it can hold the workers in check, for it thus succeeds in retaining the mask of democracy.

The task of the Opposition consists in showing the workers that the lack of success of the Communist Party has not its cause in Communism itself but in the bad leadership of the Party. The present chiefs of the Communist International have not known how to broaden the bases of the revolution, either in Europe or in China, and the result of it is a new rise of reformism, successes for the bourgeoisie, the victory of opportunism in the Communist Parties and the persecution of the Left Opposition.

It is certainly very difficult for revolutionary workers to vote for bureaucrats who are the leaders of the moment. But the votes that will go to the Communists need not be brought to the credit of these leaders who, for a long time now, are no longer considered as the leaders of the proletariat. The real leaders, such as Trotsky and many others, are persecuted, imprisoned and deported. The votes given the candidates of the Party should be considered as a protest against bourgeois domination, against social peace, as a demonstration in favor of Communism.

The E. C. C. I. Plays with the Life of the Austrian Party

As the Berlin "Rote Fahne" reports, the Plenary Session of the Communist Party of Germany met on October 24 and 25. Under the point "International Report", Remmele reported and remarked among other things as follows:

"The Austrian comrades must put on the agenda the demand for the formation of Workers' Soviets, organize the armed struggle against fascism, that is, immediately, not only theoretically or propagandistically, but practically and organizationally, raise the problem of the proletarian dictatorship."

Were this only the counsel of a Remmele to the Communist Party of Austria, it would really not be worth while to waste even a single word on the matter, but it is not a matter of a Remmele here! At this session of the Central Committee of the C. P. G. there participated representatives of the C. P. of Austria. It becomes ever more clear that it is the E. C. C. I. itself that is issuing the slogan "Form Workers' Soviets" in the present situation: the C. P. of Austria accepts this slogan, even if in a somewhat more cautious form, in the Vienna "Rote Fahne".

"The moment is also approaching when the working class, in order to conduct its struggle, will have to go over to creating Workers' Soviets."

Against this, Remmele polemized indirectly, turned against the slogan as "only theoretical or propagandist" and demanded practical realization by corresponding practical measures!

In an article "The Austrian Counter-Revolution is Preparing the Dictatorship" we considered the present situation in Austria in detail. The events since the writing of this article showed that we were right: The Socialist Party is letting the stirring of the masses fade away through numberless safety valves—conferences, meetings, preparedness of the Schutzbund (Defense League)—and confers with the counter-revolution in the constitution committee on the concrete form for legalizing the dictatorship. The "Arbeiterzeitung", central organ of the S. P. of Austria, writes on October 26:

"The population must be prepared for the negotiations to take their time. . . It will therefore be necessary in the first place to wait cool-headedly until the negotiations in the sub-commission and in the Rathaus lead to an understanding or to the break."

That is where the main danger lies now: that the still existing disposition to battle will collapse during the weeks-long negotiations in parliament to such a point that the masses will finally yield to the dictatorship without any resistance worth mentioning, as they did with the entry into office of the Schober-Vaugoin clique of the counter-revolution.

To call upon the C. P. of Austria in such a situation "to make the organizational preparations for the establishment of the proletarian dictatorship" is a disgraceful play of the worst and most conscienceless adventurers. It is not the establishment immediately on the agenda but the prevention of the stabilization of the counter-revolutionary regime!

It is the task now of the Communist Party of Austria not to dream of the uprising, for which all the social, political and military assumptions are lacking at present, but to concentrate all forces upon combining the political defensive struggle against the planned state of dictatorship with the broadest mobilization of the masses in the factories and the unemployment for economic minimum demands.

Only in this manner can the C. P. A. succeed in winning influence upon broader masses and in creating the pre-conditions for a successful resistance to the Schober regime. There can be no doubt that such a struggle has the tendency to become directly a struggle for power. Only hopeless adventurism, however, is capable of deceiving itself that these pre-conditions already exist.

The Labor Movement in Greece

Capitalism has reached the zenith of its power. In the West and in the East, in the countries where industry was almost unknown, we see it assuming gigantic proportions, as in Greece for example.

A political maneuver has brought into Greece about two million refugees from Asia Minor and has thereby strengthened the elements of the progressive bourgeoisie who, since the 1909 revolution, have advanced the industrialization of Greece. That is one part of its program accomplished, since this bourgeoisie can dispose of an abundant and inexpensive manual labor. And it may be said that this mass, since its earliest youth, has been lulled by the priests on the "grandeur of Greece which fights for the delivery of its sons from Turkey, despoiler of the Byzantine empire". But once they quitted Turkey, and returned to the country of their origin, these opinions on Christian and beneficent Greece swiftly vanished among the refugees, for now, formed into compact masses of workers in all branches of industry, notably in the spinning industry of Naoussa, as well as the tobacco factories of new and old Greece, working in common has given them new power and a penetrating ideology: the ideology of wages.

With this plethora of a new contingent of exploited, what has been the role of the Communist Party? Almost nil. It let this mass of producers serve as an electoral clientele to the Venizelist or Liberal Party, and it is with their voice that Venizelos was able to defeat feudalism with the petty bourgeois elements he was able to rally against capitalism. In order to know the Party better, we must go back a few years.

Socialism was introduced around 1912-13 by some bourgeois intellectuals who studied in Germany. These professed a sort of pulp socialism, clearly bourgeois, and their Marxism was in reality only degenerated. They are not even worth naming, and merit only disgust, for today they are overwhelmed with responsible positions in the Greek state. And, since the birth of that Socialist Party at present Communist, those who aspire to establish themselves make use of this Party. Thus, in 1922, while on the Asia Minor front the soldiers abandoned their posts with the cry "Long live Lenin", and, returning home refused to fight any longer for reasons that did not concern them, the Party did not know how to profit by the occasion. It gave a free hand to a military camarilla which diverted the spirit of the rebellious soldiers and led it only against King Constantine, or rather, against Greek feudalism.

The slogan of the C. P. G. in 1925 was: Democracy of the Left!!! that is, cooperation with the liberal bourgeoisie. The functionaries at the head of the Party, are men without principles, without ideology (it is interesting to attend an election which resembles a bourgeois election from every viewpoint; all the means employed by the bourgeoisie are made use of, such as jugs of wine, distribution of alcohol, promises of positions in the Party and the trade unions, etc.) If they are to lose their positions they not only abandon to Pa . . . cease to be Communists, like Poullopoulos, petty-bourgeois intellectual, ethically an egotist, always desirous of being the leader. As for another, the ex-Communist deputy, Maximos, he declared from the tribune of the Chamber: "We, the Communists are against all violence", and, from the other side the bourgeois deputies, weeping with laughter, cried out to him: "And Marxism, have you forgotten it." Now the two cronies, Poullopoulos and Maximos form a so-called Opposition to the Party which is just as harmful to the Greek workers as the Party itself.

The fault-crammed tactic of the Party obliged the sincere and revolutionary elements to seek a remedy for this state of affairs. That happened in 1922-23. To set the degenerated Party on the revolutionary track again, a struggle was begun; but in spite of the readiness of the militants the effort remained temporarily in vain. A division was necessary, or rather the redemption of a minority insignificant in numbers but significant enough from the point of view of revolutionary quality. The work that had to be done was enormous: to prepare the Communists in Greece was the first task, for in the Party, as well as in all the Parties of the C. I., Marxist-Leninist education was virtually dead. A review was created where much of the Marxist-Leninist literature was translated, as well as booklets to facilitate the adhesion to Communism of still uneducated workers.

At the moment of the withdrawal of the most active elements of the Party, this Opposition seemed the result of the special conditions in Greece, but today, we ascertain similar phenomena in all the Parties. The regrouping, which works under the name of the review "Archives of Marxism", and which has gathered numerous elements around the small minority from the outset, has just declared that it shares the ideas of the rest of the Left Oppositions. We can only rejoice at this declaration: an organization like the "Archives" is most qualified to lengthen the chain of the Left Oppositions.

The Chinese Communists and the Sino-Russian Conflict

On October 22, 1929, comrade L. Trotsk received a letter from a Chinese Opposition Communist, of which the following is the last part:

"What is your position in the question of the Chinese Eastern Railway? Here (in China) three slogans have been launched, one for each Communist tendency:

"Our own (that is, the Left Communist Opposition) (Against the usurpation of the Chinese Eastern Railway by the Kuo Min Tang, Defense of the U. S. S. R. in the interest of the world revolution.

"That of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China: Against intervention. For the defense of the U. S. S. R. "That of the Tchen Du-Siu tendency: Against the traitorous policy of the Kuo Min Tang.

"A letter from one of our comrades in Moscow informs us that 'it is said' that you have declared yourself a supporter of restoring the Railway to China. That appears to me absolutely unbelievable. Couldn't you write on this question?"

These few lines are weighty arguments in the discussion on the Sino-Russian conflict. In China, as we see by this letter, not a single Communist tendency accepts support of the slogan of reinforcing the Chinese counter-revolution on the back of the Soviet Republic.

The Moscow Press, like that of the Communist International, is endeavoring to pass off the viewpoint of the Korschists, of Urbahns and others for that of the Left Opposition. That is what accounts for the letter from Moscow to Shanghai which repeats that "it is said" that Comrade Trotsky is a supporter of restoring the Railway to the Kuo Min Tang generals. Also, it is significant that a Chinese comrade, separated from him by thousands upon thousands of miles (his letter took 42 days to get to Trotsky) and in spite of the categorical information from Moscow, declares: "That appears to me absolutely unbelievable."

*We are informed that the Tchen Du-Siu group, which the Comintern made the scapegoat for the policy of Stalin-Bucharin-Martinov, has developed in a remarkable manner towards the Left, under the influence of the lessons of the Chinese revolution

On the Twelfth Anniversary of the Russian October

By L. D. Trotsky

The twelfth anniversary of October finds the Republic of the Soviets in a situation where the greatest successes are combined with the vastest difficulties, and the successes like the difficulties increase simultaneously. That is the essential feature of the situation, it is the great problem.

Industry has made and continues to make stupendous conquests, if they are judged on the capitalist scale. Agriculture in these last years has progressed much more slowly but its rise was indubitable. But, at the same time, we ascertain a wholly paradoxical fact: On the market, there is a very serious scarcity of merchandise which, in spite of the progress in general economy continues from year to year, attaining at certain periods a degree of extreme crisis. The most indispensable manufactured products are lacking despite the headlong progress of industry. And the insufficiency of agricultural products, even though the country has a preponderantly agricultural character, makes itself felt to a really intolerable point. What do these contradictions signify? They have two sorts of causes.

The essential causes lie in the objective situation of an economically backward country which found itself forced to be first to come to the dictatorship of the proletariat and to socialist construction. The causes of secondary order lie in the false policy of the leadership which suffers the influences of the petty bourgeoisie, which pursues a policy of circumstances, which is incapable of understanding the situation at the right time and of utilizing the economic and political resources of the dictatorship in the most rational manner.

The Soviet State does not pay interest on the old debts. It has no, or hardly any tribute to pay to the nobles, to the bankers to the manufacturers, etc. These two circumstances, and above all the second constitute a most important fund for the industrialization of the country.

The unification of the transport industry in one and the same management which is the workers' State, an absolute condition for an economy regulated by plan, has opened up inexhaustible possibilities for a rational application of forces and means, and consequently, for the acceleration of the economic growth of the country.

Such are the tremendous assets of the October revolution. The liabilities, which do not proceed from the revolution itself but from the conditions in which it was accomplished are these: The very low level of capitalist development of czarist Russia; the diffusion of an extremely backward peasant economy; the little culture of the masses of the people; finally, the isolation in which the Soviet Republic is found, hemmed in by a powerful and infinitely richer capitalist world.

The need of expending hundreds of millions annually for the maintenance of the army and the fleet is the most immediate and evident result of the hostile encirclement of the capitalist world.

Another consequence: The monopoly of foreign trade, which is imposed on the Soviet Republic just as imperiously as the army and the fleet. The abolition, or even only weakening of the monopoly of foreign trade (Stalin tried to attain that under the influence of Sokolnikov at the end of 1922) would not only mark a return of Russia to the path of capitalism, but the reduction of that country to a semi-colonial state.

But it must not be forgotten that the monopoly of foreign trade automatically excludes Russia from that international division of labor on the basis of which its capitalist evolution was accomplished. The immediate consequence, at a time when general economy has advanced, has been an extreme reduction in foreign trade. The rapid increase of the resources employed in the industrialization is therefore called forth, to a considerable extent, by the need for the Soviet Republic to produce all that bourgeois Russia received from the outside under much more advantageous conditions. If the socialist regime existed in other countries, the monopoly of foreign trade, of course, would not be necessary, and the U.S.S.R. would receive the products it lacks from more developed countries under incomparably more advantageous conditions than those it was used to when it was a bourgeois Russia. But in the present situation the monopoly of foreign trade, absolutely indispensable to protect the socialist bases of economy, requires that tremendous investments be made in industry quite simply for the defense of the country. Hence, the general percentage of the growth of industry being very high, a chronic insufficiency of manufactured products.

Peasant economy, very scattered by a past tradition, became still more so following upon the October Revolution, in the measure that it had to be after a democratic agrarian revolution.

The diffusion of the agricultural enterprises would have created serious difficulties for the socialist transformation of rural economy in Russia, even in case the proletariat were in power in a more advanced country. These difficulties are much more considerable now that the country of the October Revolution is left entirely to itself. However, the extremely slow rhythm of the socialist transformation of village economy brings on more extended partition of peasant enterprises and is the cause, consequently, of a strengthening of their consuming powers. That is one of the reasons why agricultural products happen to be lacking.

The high cost of industrial products has no less a significance. That is the price industry must pay for its passage from a backward technique to a higher technique, and at the same time it must incessantly assure new investments in industrial branches that have become indispensable as a result of the regime of the monopoly of foreign trade. In other words: The village pays a heavy tribute to socialist industry.

The peasant class makes a serious distinction between the democratic agrarian revolution accomplished by the Bolsheviks and the foundation of a socialist revolution that they have laid. The lands of the State and the landlords are in the power of the peasants; it is a democratic revolution worth about half a billion rubles to the latter, by delivering them from the necessity of paying farm rent. But the peasants pay, as a result of the diversion of prices ("the scissors"), a much greater sum which is set down to the profit of State industry. Thus, the balance of the two revolutions, the democratic and the proletarian, united in October, shows, even now, a minus for the peasant class that can be estimated at several hundreds of millions of rubles. That is the incontestable and most important fact for him who wishes to estimate not only the economic situation but the political situation of the country. This fact must be considered plainly. It springs, at bottom, from the strained relations that exist between the peasant class and the government of the Soviets.

The increasing abatement of rural economy, the persistent scattering of its means, the "scissors" of agricultural prices and industrial prices, in a word, the economic difficulties that are manifest in the village, favor the growth of the power of the Kulaks and the progress of their influence in the country out of proportion to the number of these Kulaks and the material resources at their command. The grain surpluses that belong primarily to upper sections permit them to enslave the poor, to speculate in the sales made to the petty bourgeois elements of the city, and so these surpluses are excluded from the general trade of the State. Grain is lacking not only for export but for home needs. Exports being extremely reduced, the necessity arises not only of giving up the importation of manufactured products but of limiting to the last degree the importation of machinery and industrial raw materials, and in that case the slightest progress of industrialization must be paid for by an extreme tension of economic resources.

Thus is explained essentially, why, with a restoration of economy and a very rapid growth of industrialization, the Soviet Republic does not emerge from the regime of "the queue", a regime that constitutes the most vivid argument against the theory of socialism in one country.

But "the queue" is also an argument against the official practices in general. Here we pass from the objective causes to the subjective causes, that is to say, primarily to the policy of the leadership. It is beyond doubt that a leadership, even the most correct and perspicacious, could not lead the U.S.S.R. to a building of socialism within the national frame-work if it remained closed to world economy by the monopoly of foreign trade. If the proletarian revolution in the advanced capitalist countries were set back a few dozen years, the dictatorship of the proletariat in the Soviet Republic would inevitably fall, succumbing under the economic contradictions, in their pure form, or as a result of a military intervention. In the language of politics, this means that the fate of the Soviet Republic, in the general conditions that we have characterized above, is determined as much by the internal economic direction as by the direction given to the revolutionary struggle of the international proletariat. And, in the end, it is precisely this last factor that must determine everything.

A correct economic direction in the U.S.S.R. is the utilization of the resources and the possibility by means of which socialist progress is accompanied by a genuine and tangible improvement of the condition of the working masses. At this moment, it is not at all a question, practically, of "surpassing" all of world economy—a task which would be fantastic—but of consolidating the industrial bases of the proletarian dictatorship and of improving the condition of the workers, by strengthening the first political principle of the dictatorship, that is, the alliance of the proletariat with the non-exploiting peasants.

A correct policy in the U.S.S.R. must make the dictatorship last as long as possible under the conditions of isolation in which the country finds itself. A correct policy of the Communist International must, as much as possible, bring closer the victory of the proletariat in the advanced countries. At a certain point these two lines must merge. It is only on this condition that the present Soviet regime, full of contradictions, will have the possibility, without any Thermidor, without counter-revolution, without new revolutions, of developing itself into a socialist society on a basis that will go on widening, which must finally, extend over the whole globe.

Time, which is one of the most important factors in politics in general, has a decisive character when it is a question of the fate of the U.S.S.R. Now, the present leadership, since 1923, has done everything to let time pass by without profiting by it. The years 1923, 1924 and 1925 were devoted to the struggle against "super-industrialization": By that was meant a demand of the Opposition aiming to accelerate industrial development; these years were employed in fighting against the principle of a general plan and against economic forecasts. If industrialization then advanced more quickly, it was by empirical means, by jerks, by brutal methods that crushed everything along the road, and from that the expenses of construction have been multiplied, the condition of the working masses has become more difficult.

It is six years ago that the Opposition demanded the elaboration of a five year plan. This demand was met with ridicule at the time, entirely in the spirit of a small boss who dreads to face great problems and broad perspectives. That is what we called Menshevism in economy. In April 1927, Stalin declared, for example, that the hydro-electric station of Dnieper was just as little necessary to the country as a phonograph or a moujik (poor peasant), and at the same time he denied absolutely that the rhythm of our economic revolution depended on world development.

The five year plan has come after a delay of five years. The errors, the transformations and the corrections of the last years took place without any general plan, and it is for this sole reason that the leadership learned so very little from them. One cannot neglect to say here that the first draft was thoroughly imbued with the most niggardly spirit of minimalism, with a great economic timidity. This draft was mercilessly criticized in the Platform of the Opposition. It is only under the action of our criticism which corresponds to the keenest needs of economic development, that the five year plan was remade from one end to the other in the course of the year.

All the grounds invoked against "super-industrialization" were suddenly rejected. The apparatus, which had worked for several years in the spirit of economic Menshevism received the order to regard as heresy all that had been considered holy scripture only the day before, and as a set-off to transform into official figures the heresies that were called "Trotskyism" only yesterday. The apparatus—Communists and specialists—were not at all prepared for this: They had been educated in a wholly different spirit. The first attempts at resistance or timid protestations were mercilessly punished. And how could it be otherwise? To allow explanations would be to disclose that the leadership was bankrupt, having lost all the principles of its theory. This time again the apparatus submitted silently. To him* who directed the elaboration of the plan, this formula is attributed: "It is better to stand up for a rapid development than to lay (in prison) for a less rapid development."

If the new plan were elaborated under blows, it is not hard to imagine, when it is a question of applying it, what resistance it will encounter from the apparatus, nine-tenths of which is more to the Right than the official Right. The Left Wing, from whose platform the essential ideas of the new five year plan have been copied, remains under the hall of repression and calumny. The apparatus lives in expectation of new changes and rights-about-face, not deciding even to call to its aid the union of poor peasants. The Party is placed each time before an accomplished fact. The apparatus has no confidence in it and fears it. Under these conditions, no one sees in the new five year plan the expression of a considered and more or less assured course to the Left. No one, unless it be the capitalists.

As much must be said of the policy of the Communist International. From the alliance with Chiang Kai-Shek, from the theory of the "Bloc of four classes", from the slogan of workers' and peasants' Parties, from amicable collaboration with the General Council of the British Trade Unions that crushed the General Strike, the Communist International in twenty-four hours has arrived at the slogan: No agreements with the reformists, fight against social pacifism for the possession of the streets. The new acute angle of this zig-zag is founded on the theory of the "third period" which can be said to be specifically calculated to spread illusions, to provoke adventures and to prepare a new evolution, as usual, towards the Right.

The twelfth anniversary of the October Revolution takes place at a time when the Soviet Republic and the International are in the greatest difficulties and contradictions that show, by way of opposites, the correctness of the Marxist theory of the socialist revolution. With Lenin, we entered into the October Revolution, profoundly convinced that the revolution in Russia could not have a finished character, independent of the other countries. We estimated that this revolution could only be the first link of the world revolution and that the fate of this link depended upon the destinies of the whole chain. We remain today on this position. The progress of its contradictions, and the progress would be inevitably absorbed by the contradictions of the Republic of the Soviets were not supported later on by the successes of an international revolution.

The exclusion from the Party and the rigorous persecutions exercised against the revolutionary wing in the Soviet Republic are the political expression of the contradictions of a proletarian revolution isolated in a backward country. Paradoxical though the fact may be that the Bessekovskys—and they are innumerable—are the first to expel the Rakovskys, and that on the first occasion they pass over to the Whites, the fact is no less logical for it.

Spinoza said: "Not to laugh, not to weep, but to understand." To understand, in order to continue the fight for the October Revolution.

The thirtieth year will mark an aggravation of the contradictions. The Party, deprived of forces and strangled, can be suddenly surprised. At the first great difficulty that arises, the Bessekovskys of all kinds will raise their heads. The Centrist apparatus will show that it is only an apparatus and nothing more. The proletarian

The New Unions and the Communists

By James P. Cannon

In the correspondence from the Illinois coal fields there is room for serious thought. These informative and authoritative letters from the fields of battle—models of proletarian journalism giving a fresh meaning to the term "Workers' Correspondence"—cast a searching light upon a disease in the new union movement which threatens its existence.

This sickness consists—to speak plainly—in the importing into the new unions the labor fakery* arts from the fraudulent banner of "Communist leadership". To the shame of Communism this rotten business held the stage under the Communist Party auspices at the District Conference of the National Miners Union at Belleville, Illinois. And the scene enacted there was only a replica, made cruder by enlargement, of the routine game being played in all the new unions and which is evoking in all of them the inevitable revolt.

The Foster Wrecking Crew

This strangulation and disruption of promising movements for the organization of the workers in important industries is becoming an old story. For a long time the situation among the marine workers has been crying aloud for industrial organization. Experienced and capable militants are not lacking for the job—men who have been thru the mill, who enjoy the confidence of the seamen and know how to organize them. But, thanks to the Foster wrecking crew, the marine workers organization has its being largely in the bombastic headlines and lying news stories of the Daily Worker. The position of the Auto Workers Union was recorded in a letter from Detroit printed in a recent issue of The Militant. The Party bosses have "captured" this union, captured it and locked it up in the Party office where the auto slaves will never find it. The Needle Trades Industrial Union which had the most favorable chances of all, is today only a pale shadow of what it might have been. And the National Textile Workers Union—the football of Party factionalism since its ill-starred birth—lies paralyzed while the Party experts debate and golden opportunities go by. The new union movement as a whole, inoculated with the Foster medicine, is reeling like a victim of poison moonshine.

What is the matter?

Like the left wing organizations in all spheres of labor activity, this great potential movement of new unionism is registering the ruinous effects of the internal crisis of the Communist Party. The appointed Party leaders carry over into the mass organizations the same foul practices which signalize their rule in the Party. They set as their first task the control of the new unions, and they effect this "control" by methods that insult proletarian intelligence as they offend proletarian morality.

Unlearned and appointed leadership has no faith in itself. It prefers mechanical control of half-dead organizations to the struggle for influence in living movements. Foster and Company want "leadership" in the new unions insured in and guaranteed in advance by mechanical measures. Ninety per cent of their "mass work" and 99 per cent of the funds at their disposal are devoted to this barren accomplishment. The result is an absolutely artificial selection of the leading bodies of the new unions and a stifling of their inner life.

Everything is cut and dried in these unions. There is little for the members to do at the meetings except listen to long-winded speeches. There is nothing for them to decide—everything is decided for them in advance. Intelligent non-Party workers are systematically squeezed out thru the application of the asinine formula—which follows the doctrine of the "Third Period" as pestilence follows famine—that everybody who is not a Communist is a traitor. Every Party quarrel is immediately transferred into the union, and one who gets crossways with the Party regime immediately becomes a target for slander and frame-up, as, is now the case with John Watt, president of the National Miners Union.

The reckless gambling with the Workers movement which marked the career of the Lovestone faction as the American representatives of Stalinism, has been elaborated in previous documents—documents which Foster signed jointly with us. The conduct of the present Party bureaucracy, headed by Foster who learned from Gompers, is distinguished from that of Lovestone only by a vaster clumsiness and a profounder ignorance.

Belleville's Significance

The methods of the Foster overseers are in conflict with the needs and interests of the new unions and with the impulses

in their deepest ranks towards a genuine workers' movement. The explosion at the Belleville convention of the miners—where 40 or more delegates bolted—is an alarming reminder of this conflict. We see in the miners union—and not only in the miners—the portentous appearance of a line-up of honest rank and file elements against the Party; or, rather of the Party against the rank and file militants—for the Party militants are the aggressors in the whole evil circumstance and are responsible for it.

This revolt from below against neo-fakerism tricked out in counterfeit Communist badges, which broke out in the Miners' Union and which smolders in others, is a sign of internal health and strength. The question whether it will remain a negative protest or become a positive force for the regeneration of the movement is a burning one. Indeed matters have come to such a pass that the part to be played by the new unions in the stormy days ahead hinges upon that question.

The answer lies in the first place with the politically conscious forces of the Communist vanguard who alone are capable of grasping the problem in its manifold aspects and of organizing the struggle to cope with it.

Without the intervention of the most conscious and uncorrupted elements in the Communist ranks to right the situation the left wing will pay for the sins of Party mismanagement with a recrudescence of syndicalism. Signs of this already are not lacking.

For this struggle we have no new or magic formulas and none are needed. The teachings of Leninism on the work of Communists in the trade unions, as laid down by the fundamental documents of the Communist International, are a sufficient guide. It is time to study them again, to make them part of the consciousness of the revolutionary workers and to set them up against the monstrous perversions practiced today in the name of Communism.

The new unions are at a fork of the road. One way—the way of the Party bureaucrats—leads to degeneration and collapse; the other to a period of expansion and healthy growth for which all conditions are favorable. In the interest of the latter it is of vital importance now for the members and supporters of the Communist League to bring into the foreground some fundamental conceptions, to make a sharper and more aggressive fight for them in

MINNEAPOLIS FOR GASTONIA

Following the issuance of a call for a Unity Conference for Gastonia Defense, signed by active militants in the labor movement of Minneapolis and St. Paul, a large and representative gathering met at Labor Headquarters, October 29, to discuss and act upon the frame-up of the Gastonia textile fighters and the massacre of the Marion strikers.

The meeting was called to order by acting secretary Carl Skoglund, who set forth the object of the conference, namely: to acquaint the workers of Minneapolis with the situation in the southern textile industry, especially the Gastonia trials, and to inaugurate a campaign in Minneapolis to aid the workers in defending themselves while organizing. Skoglund then called for nominations for temporary officers. He was elected as temporary chairman and A. G. Edmunds was chosen temporary secretary. The agenda for the conference was then read and adopted.

Upon a motion, a credentials committee of three was appointed by the chairman, consisting of Lee R. Miller of the Electrical Workers, John A. Nelson of the Steam Fitters and Helpers, and V. R. Dunne of the Communist League of America.

Hedlund Speaks on Case
C. R. Hedlund, well-known left-wing fighter in the Engineers union gave a short summary of the various labor disputes in past labor history and called attention to the new persecutions that are taking place in the Southern textile industry. He urged all workers to unite for the purpose of defending all attempts of workers to organize and to bring all the labor forces into action on behalf of working class defense. The credentials committee then reported the following organizations and delegates in attendance.

Steam Fitters and Helpers, Local 539: John A. Nelson, Platers and Polishers: P. J. Neuman, Broom Makers Union: E. S.

the unions and to organize the conscious militants inside and outside the Party for this fight. The issue must be brought into the open before the workers. The Foster fakery will howl about our exposure of the shameful game they are playing at the expense of the movement. Let them howl! And see that stronger blows are dealt against them.

The organization of the workers for the elementary struggle is the primary revolutionary task, and the building of the new unions the most important medium for its execution. The revolutionaries will fulfill their historic task only to the extent that they understand the proper relations between the masses and the vanguard and create an internal regime in the unions which attracts and holds the masses.

The Need For Workers Democracy

This means a struggle to make the new unions democratic organizations in reality, and not merely in hypocritical declarations. They must function as self-sufficient bodies, freely determining their own course, working out their own rules and selecting their own leaders. The right of expression for various divergent political views and tendencies must be firmly established. The workers who are banded together there for a common struggle against their exploiters must be able to feel that they are in their own house, not the tolerated guests of the Party. The meetings, conferences and conventions of the new unions must have a formal and binding character.

Only so can the new unions develop into genuine mass organizations and unless they become such they are doomed. They must aim to include in their ranks not simply Communists and a fringe of sympathizers, but the masses, without whose participation the unions have no power. Not only the politically conscious, but the politically indifferent, the backward and even the reactionary (who are the vast majority) must find a place in the unions. Formal proclamations on this score are plentiful but mean nothing. What is necessary is a deliberate course in this direction.

The leading forces in the new unions ought to represent a united front of the Communists with the progressives. The shallow-minded, phrase-mongers imagine that the formation of new unions disposes of the vexing problem of progressives. A greater absurdity is hardly conceivable. There is not a single organization of workers which expands beyond the paper bounds of a Party "auxiliary"—that is to say, of a duplicate of the Party membership —where a united front with the progressives is not a categorical condition for growth and development. In America there are only a few thousand scattered Communists among millions of politically indifferent and reactionary workers. The key to the unity and consolidation of the new unions, to the problem of leadership and the expansion of revolutionary influence is combination of the revolutionary and the progressive-minded workers. Without this it is impossible under the present conditions to organize new unions on a mass basis. Pig-headed insistence on a Communist monopoly of the directing organs does not—as experience has amply demonstrated—result in Communist leadership of the masses. It simply results in the exclusion of the masses from the union.

The Mechanical Control Disease

The mechanical control sickness must be eliminated if the new unions are to live. There is nothing revolutionary in the dogma that Communists should control the unions by arbitrary and bureaucratic means. The French Communist Party was severely condemned for this very nonsense at the Fourth Congress of the Communist International when Lenin and Trotsky were at the helm. It is the refuge of feeble people who are afraid of the rough and tumble fight for influence and leadership. In its effect it is sectarian and reactionary. It has become a fetter on the development of a workers mass movement—the primary revolutionary task—and a source of discredit to Communism.

Communist leadership of the masses is one of the prerequisites for the revolutionary victory of the proletariat. But, conversely, the organization of the "million masses"—to use De Leon's classic phrase—is likewise a preliminary necessity to the constitution of a genuine class movement on the road to a struggle for power. It is only in this process that the revolutionary leadership can expand. Tactics and methods at this stage of events ought properly to be judged by how they help or hinder this work of organizing the masses. And by this standard the "mechanical control" idea stands condemned.

Leadership of the masses cannot be "captured" without their knowledge or consent. Communist influence which precedes and evolves into leadership can only be based on service to the broad workers' movement which the workers understand and approve. Serious and consistent work for the building of the new unions in preparation for the great impending struggles will do more than anything else at the present time to promote the influence of the Communists. Clear the way for this work.

possible after the selection of that body. Resolutions were adopted protesting against the convictions in Charlotte and demanding the release of the prisoners, and another expressing solidarity with the Marion strikers and protesting the murder of five workers by the sheriff and his thugs. Copies were sent to the Governor of North Carolina, to President Hoover, to labor organizations and the press.

The success of the Minneapolis conference shows the tremendous reservoir of support that can be obtained for the defense of Gastonia if a genuine effort is made to organize united action. That such action has been bitterly opposed up to now by the leaders of the Communist Party makes the task more difficult, but, as Minneapolis shows, far from impossible

MINNEAPOLIS CLASSES OPEN

The Minneapolis Branch of the Communist League of America (Opposition) announces the opening of winter classes for the study of problems facing the labor movement. Cowi's class opened Tuesday evening, November 19th at 401 Washington Avenue South at 7:45 p. m. Registration for the classes can be made by all workers by applying to the School Committee at Box 45, Minneapolis.

The New Unions and the Communists

By James P. Cannon

In the correspondence from the Illinois coal fields there is room for serious thought. These informative and authoritative letters from the fields of battle—models of proletarian journalism giving a fresh meaning to the term "Workers' Correspondence"—cast a searching light upon a disease in the new union movement which threatens its existence.

This sickness consists—to speak plainly—in the importing into the new unions the labor fakery arts under the fraudulent banner of "Communist leadership". To the shame of Communism this rotten business held the stage under the Communist Party auspices at the District Conference of the National Miners Union at Belleville, Illinois. And the scene enacted there was only a replica, made cruder by enlargement, of the routine game being played in all the new unions and which is evoking in all of them the inevitable revolt.

The Foster Wrecking Crew

This strangulation and disruption of promising movements for the organization of the workers in important industries is becoming an old story. For a long time the situation among the marine workers has been crying aloud for industrial organization. Experienced and capable militants are not lacking for the job—men who have been thru the mill, who enjoy the confidence of the seamen and know how to organize them. But, thanks to the Foster wrecking crew, the marine workers organization has its being largely in the bombastic headlines and lying news stories of the Daily Worker.

The answer lies in the first place with the politically conscious forces of the Communist vanguard who alone are capable of grasping the problem in its manifold aspects and of organizing the struggle to cope with it.

Without the intervention of the most conscious and uncorrupted elements in the Communist ranks to right the situation the left wing will pay for the sins of Party mismanagement with a recrudescence of syndicalism. Signs of this already are not lacking.

For this struggle we have no new or magic formulas and none are needed. The teachings of Leninism on the work of Communists in the trade unions, as laid down by the fundamental documents of the Communist International, are a sufficient guide. It is time to study them again, to make them part of the consciousness of the revolutionary workers and to set them up against the monstrous perversions practiced today in the name of Communism.

What is the matter?

Like the left wing organizations in all spheres of labor activity, this great potential movement of new unionism is registering the ruinous effects of the internal crisis of the Communist Party. The appointed Party leaders carry over into the mass organizations the same foul practices which signalize their rule in the Party. They set as their first task the control of the new unions, and they effect this "control" by methods that insult proletarian intelligence as they offend proletarian morality.

Unearned and appointed leadership has no faith in itself. It prefers mechanical control of half-dead organizations to the struggle for influence in living movements. Foster and Company want "leadership" in the new unions insured in and guaranteed in advance by mechanical measures. Ninety per cent of their "mass work" and 99 per cent of the funds at their disposal are devoted to this barren accomplishment. The result is an absolutely artificial selection of the leading bodies of the new unions and a stifling of their inner life.

Everything is cut and dried in these unions. There is little for the members to do at the meetings except listen to long-winded speeches. There is nothing for them to decide—everything is decided for them in advance. Intelligent non-Party workers are systematically squeezed out thru the application of the asinine formula—which follows the doctrine of the "Third Period"—as pestilence follows the Communist—that everybody who is not a Communist is a traitor. Every Party quarrel is immediately transferred into the union, and one who gets crosswords with the Party regime immediately becomes a target for slander and frame-up, as is now the case with John Watt, president of the National Miners Union.

The reckless gambling with the Workers movement which marked the career of the Lovestone faction as the American representatives of Stalinism, has been elaborated in previous documents—documents which Foster signed jointly with us. The conduct of the present Party bureaucracy, headed by Foster who learned from Compers, is distinguished from that of Lovestone only by a vaster clumsiness and a profounder ignorance.

Belleville's Significance

The methods of the Foster overseers are in conflict with the needs and interests of the new unions and with the impulses

in their deepest ranks towards a genuine workers' movement. The explosion at the Belleville convention of the miners—where 40 or more delegates bolted—is an alarming reminder of this conflict. We see in the miners union—and not only in the miners—the portentous appearance of a line-up of honest rank and file elements against the Party; or, rather, of the Party against the rank and file militants—for the Party militants are the aggressors in the whole evil circumstance and are responsible for it.

This revolt from below against neofakerism tricked out in counterfeited Communist badges, which broke out in the Miners' Union and which smolders in others, is a sign of internal health and strength. The question whether it will remain a negative protest or become a positive force for the regeneration of the movement is a burning one. Indeed, matters have come to such a pass that the part to be played by the new unions in the stormy days ahead hinges upon that question.

The answer lies in the first place with the politically conscious forces of the Communist vanguard who alone are capable of grasping the problem in its manifold aspects and of organizing the struggle to cope with it.

Without the intervention of the most conscious and uncorrupted elements in the Communist ranks to right the situation the left wing will pay for the sins of Party mismanagement with a recrudescence of syndicalism. Signs of this already are not lacking.

For this struggle we have no new or magic formulas and none are needed. The teachings of Leninism on the work of Communists in the trade unions, as laid down by the fundamental documents of the Communist International, are a sufficient guide. It is time to study them again, to make them part of the consciousness of the revolutionary workers and to set them up against the monstrous perversions practiced today in the name of Communism.

The new unions are at a fork of the road. One way—the way of the Party bureaucrats—leads to degeneration and collapse; the other to a period of expansion and healthy growth for which all conditions are favorable. In the interest of the latter it is of vital importance now for the members and supporters of the Communist League to bring into the foreground some fundamental conceptions, to make a sharper and more aggressive fight for them in

Following the issuance of a call for a Unity Conference for Gastonia Defense, signed by active militants in the labor movement of Minneapolis and St. Paul, a large and representative gathering met at Labor Headquarters, October 29, to discuss and act upon the frame-up of the Gastonia textile fighters and the massacre of the Marion strikers.

The meeting was called to order by acting secretary Carl Skoglund, who set forth the object of the conference, namely: to acquaint the workers of Minneapolis with the situation in the southern textile industry, especially the Gastonia trials, and to inaugurate a campaign in Minneapolis to aid the workers in defending themselves while organizing. Skoglund then called for nominations for temporary officers. He was elected as temporary chairman and A. G. Edmunds was chosen temporary secretary. The agenda for the conference was then read and adopted.

Upon a motion, a credentials committee of three was appointed by the chairman, consisting of Lee R. Miller of the Electrical Workers, John A. Nelson of the Steam Fitters and Helpers, and V. R. Dunne of the Communist League of America.

Hedlund Speaks on Case

C. R. Hedlund, well-known left-wing fighter in the Engineers union gave a short summary of the various labor disputes in past labor history and called attention to the new persecutions that are taking place in the Southern textile industry. He urged all workers to unite for the purpose of defending all attempts of workers to organize and to bring all the labor forces into action on behalf of working class defense. The credentials committee then reported the following organizations and delegates in attendance.

Steam Fitters and Helpers, Local 539; John A. Nelson, Platers and Polishers; P. J. Neuman, Broom Makers Union; E. S.

the unions and to organize the conscious militants inside and outside the Party for this fight. The issue must be brought into the open before the workers. The Foster fakery will howl about our exposure of the shameful game they are playing at the expense of the movement. Let them howl! And see that stronger blows are dealt against them.

The organization of the workers for the elementary struggle is the primary revolutionary task, and the building of the new unions the most important medium for its execution. The revolutionaries will fulfill their historic task only to the extent that they understand the proper relations between the masses and the vanguard and create an internal regime in the unions which attracts and holds the masses.

The Need For Workers Democracy

This means a struggle to make the new unions democratic organizations in reality, and not merely in hypocritical declarations. They must function as self-sufficient bodies, freely determining their own course, working out their own rules and selecting their own leaders. The right of expression for various divergent political views and tendencies must be firmly established. The workers who are banded together there for a common struggle against their exploiters must be able to feel that they are in their own house, not the tolerated guests of the Party. The meetings, conferences and conventions of the new unions must have a formal and binding character.

Only so can the new unions develop into genuine mass organizations and unless they become such they are doomed. They must aim to include in their ranks not simply Communists and a fringe of sympathizers, but the masses, without whose participation the unions have no power. Not only the politically conscious, but the politically indifferent, the backward and even the reactionary (who are the vast majority) must find a place in the unions. Formal proclamations on this score are plentiful but mean nothing. What is necessary is a deliberate course in this direction.

The leading forces in the new unions ought to represent a united front of the Communists with the progressives. The shallow-minded, phrase-mongers imagine that the formation of new unions disposes of the vexing problem of progressives. A greater absurdity is hardly conceivable. There is not a single organization of workers which expands beyond the paper bounds of a Party "auxiliary"—that is to say, of a duplicate of the Party membership possible after the selection of that body.

Resolutions were adopted protesting against the convictions in Charlotte and demanding the release of the prisoners, and another expressing solidarity with the Marion strikers and protesting the murder of five workers by the sheriff and his thugs. Copies were sent to the Governor of North Carolina, to President Hoover, to labor organizations and the press.

The success of the Minneapolis conference shows the tremendous reservoir of support that can be obtained for the defense of Gastonia if a genuine effort is made to organize united action. That such action has been bitterly opposed up to now by the leaders of the Communist Party makes the task more difficult, but, as Minneapolis shows, far from impossible

All were seated, as well as the signers of the provisional call, and Skoglund was chosen permanent chairman with A. G. Edmunds as permanent secretary.

The opinions of the delegates being then called for, all delegates agreed that whatever differences of opinion might exist among organizations, unity can and must be had on the question of defending persecuted workers. A motion was made that the conference call a public mass meeting as soon as possible to acquaint the workers of Minneapolis with the Gastonia and Marion situations and amended that another such conference be called before such a mass meeting takes place in order to insure greater success. The amended motion was adopted.

All organizations represented by delegates were asked to elect one representative on the executive committee, and the permanent officers were instructed to call an Executive Committee meeting as soon as

—where a united front with the progressives is not a categorical condition for growth and development. In America there are only a few thousand scattered Communists among millions of politically indifferent and reactionary workers. The key to the unity and consolidation of the new unions, to the problem of leadership and the expansion of revolutionary influence is combination of the revolutionary with the progressive-minded workers. Without this it is impossible under the present conditions to organize new unions on a mass basis. Pig-headed insistence on a Communist monopoly of the directing organs does not—as experience has amply demonstrated—result in Communist leadership of the masses. It simply results in the exclusion of the masses from the union.

The Mechanical Control Disease

The mechanical control sickness must be eliminated if the new unions are to live. There is nothing revolutionary in the dogma that Communists should control the unions by arbitrary and bureaucratic means. The French Communist Party was severely condemned for this very nonsense at the Fourth Congress of the Communist International when Lenin and Trotsky were at the helm. It is the refuge of feeble people who are afraid of the rough and tumble fight for influence and leadership. In its effect it is sectarian and reactionary. It has become a fetter on the development of a workers mass movement—the primary revolutionary task—and a source of discredit to Communism.

Communist leadership of the masses is one of the prerequisites for the revolutionary victory of the proletariat. But, conversely, the organization of the "million masses"—to use De Leon's classic phrase—is likewise a preliminary necessity to the constitution of a genuine class movement on the road to a struggle for power. It is only in this process that the revolutionary leadership can expand. Tactics and methods at this stage of events ought properly to be judged by how they help or hinder this work of organizing the masses. And by this standard the "mechanical control" idea stands condemned.

Leadership of the masses cannot be "captured" without their knowledge or consent. Communist influence which precedes and evolves into leadership can only be based on service to the broad workers' movement which the workers understand and approve. Serious and consistent work for the building of the new unions in preparation for the great impending struggles will do more than anything else at the present time to promote the influence of the Communists. The Illinois Miners' Belleville Conference of Farrington and Lewis!

Now understand that as yet there had been no rank and file delegate that spoke from the convention floor. The volcano created by the wrong policy was beginning to smoke.

Watt's Speech

After the resolution that Toohy introduced was adopted John Watt was asked by Voyzey to address the convention. When Watt took the floor the volcano burst into a flame. And right here I want to say that I don't endorse everything that Watt has done, but I must agree with Watt that the position he took at this convention was correct. The first words that Watt uttered in his talk which lasted about 20 minutes was that the convention was not called to hear speeches but to outline a program and a plan of action for building the National Miners Union. He took Toohy's attack on the so-called "operators' neutrality" policy and showed with figures that Toohy distorted what he really said at the last Belleville conference. Watt showed with figures that the coal operators were caught off guard, that there is only a few weeks supply of coal on top, that this is the right time of the season to strike against coal operators and that we must make the most of the squabble between Lewis and Fishwick. Then he criticized the leadership of the Communist Party for trying to isolate him from working among the miners and all those not members of the Communist Party.

Watt made a plea for Soviet Russia, for the Russian Communist Party, but launched into a bitter attack against the leadership of the American Party, using the latest issue of the Improcorr (the speech of Losovsky at the 10th Plenum on trade union work) for his attack. Watt said that he considered himself a Communist despite anything that the C. P. may say to the contrary and concluded his talk by urging the miners to build a class conscious and militant union. While Watt was speaking, Foster came into the convention hall and went on the speakers platform, but something went wrong as there was no demonstration from the convention of any kind. As soon as Watt finished his talk, Voyzey turned to Foster and began to say something, but the delegates, one after another, began to make motions for adjournment for lunch. The time was 1:30 p.m. and so the convention was adjourned for lunch.

The afternoon session was convened with Voyzey saying that the convention is now thrown open for discussion from the delegates. But Voyzey failed to mention the fact that the discussion must come only from Communist Party members. So the first discussion that comes from the floor was Corbishly, Slinger, Thompson, Voyzey and Allard on the floor with almost the same speech with little variation: "I am a Communist, Watt is a faker." Rat-tat-rat-tat—just like that one after the other. I tried to get the floor after Thompson spoke but the Stalinites were able to carry a motion to cease debate by a vote of 67 to 30. Then the motion made previously that Watt's case be referred to the national executive board with final decision to rest with the international convention was carried with the same vote.

After the vote was taken and while Foster was being introduced, about 20 delegates arose and walked out of the convention in protest against the action of not allowing more discussion from the floor. Foster thought that Watt had walked out with the delegates and started to attack Watt for the walkout, but after Watt protested against such a line of attack, Foster changed his speech, and spoke about Gastonia, the T. U. U. L., etc.

Angelo Urges Bolters Return

I listened a few minutes to Foster's speech and then went out of the convention hall to see what had happened to the delegates that had walked out. The delegates that had walked out had all gathered near the entrance of the convention hall with a few Stalinites among them like Sklar and Kernenovich, calling the delegates who walked out fakers, etc. I urged all the delegates to return and help finish the business. My plea was met with: "No, we're done with the convention, we're going home."

I went into the convention and Foster had finished his speech and a resolution calling upon Watt "to cease all activities among the miners of Illinois" was introduced by Corbishly who moved the adoption of the resolution. I moved an amendment to table the resolution and pointed out that Watt was not on trial at this convention and that his case had been referred to the national executive board and the international convention. My motion was voted down and the resolution adopted with a few nays. Immediately after the vote nine delegates walked out; this time Watt went along.

McMillan, Goldberg, Payer (of the St. Louis branch of the Communist League) and myself immediately got together and walked out before they scattered without. We rented a room in the Lyric Hotel and told all the delegates that bolted the convention to go there for a meeting. While the delegates were going to the new hall, I personally went to Foster and told him that we had organized the delegates that bolted the convention, that the crazy "Left" policy of attacking everyone who was not a Communist as a faker and the machine rule at the convention was responsible for the walkout of the delegates, that the delegates who bolted represented the majority of the National Miners Union. They had serious differences with regards to the incorrect line of the C. P. that is being pursued in Illinois, especially the uncalled for attacks in the mining fields on the leaders of the National Miners Union in Staunton, Livingston, etc., who are not Party members. They are told that unless they join the Communist Party they will be slaughtered and deprived of all work in the National Miners Union. I told Foster that these delegates had a grievance because of the mistakes the Party had made in the Illinois mining fields and that he should come into our meeting to hear of these mistakes committed by the Party for the purpose of changing these incorrect policies before it is too late.

Foster came into our meeting and the delegates began to protest against the actions of the convention for not allowing thorough rank and file discussion on the floor of the convention, protested against the attack on Watt, protested against the C. P. organizers trying to intimidate non-Party miners by threats to carrying out Party orders, against the narrow line of the Party in trying to build not a mass organization out of the N. M. U. but a narrow sect of C. P. members.

Foster's answer to all the protests was his usual one: "Yes, but let's not talk about these things now. All you delegates must come back into the convention, else the capitalist papers tomorrow will say that there was a split in the N. M. U." The delegates said they did not care what the capitalist papers said about them. Before they went back into the convention the uncalled-for resolution attacking Watt would be withdrawn. If that was not done they would go back home, double their work in building the N. M. U. and change the incorrect line being pursued in the N. M. U. They would fight for a policy that would unite not only Communists but also the backward workers into the N. M. U.

After Foster left our meeting, I was elected chairman and the following decisions were made by the 30 delegates present:

1. That we fight and organize the miners into the N. M. U.
 2. That we protest the action taken against Watt.
 3. That we call a conference of the Staunton sub-district on Sunday, November 3, at Staunton, Ill., for the purpose of mobilizing the miners into the N. M. U.
- After the meeting every delegate presented pledged that he would go home and do all in his power to build the N. M. U., to clean out the Lewises and the Fishwicks.

A few words in general about the convention and the future work in the new unions created by the C. P. The bolting of the delegates from the convention was a spontaneous rank and file revolt against the narrow line being pursued by the C. P. in its trade union work. And further, if the Communist League comrades had not been on the job, the delegates would have gone home discouraged and it would have had a very bad effect on the work of building the N. M. U. in Illinois. Our Opposition forces organized the delegates that walked out of the convention and I am correct in saying that our group prevented a split in the N. M. U. and put new life into the rank and file delegates, to fight to build the N. M. U. and change the incorrect policy in the union as framed by the C. P. leaders.

The C. P. did not analyze correctly the situation in Illinois and overestimated its own strength in the coal fields here. What happened before the convention was that the N. M. U. took a sudden surge forward, due to the squabble between Lewis and Fishwick and hundreds of miners joined the N. M. U. in the last two months. The C. P., instead of educating these new members to understand Communism, is trying to force these workers in the N. M. U. by "direct action" to belong to the C. P. or else tell them that they would be prevented from working in the N. M. U. If this is not sickness of some kind, I am Holy Moses. The slogan seems to be: Every N. M. U. member must be a Party member!

Stalinism and Union Democracy

Another impression I got from the convention in Belleville is that no opposition of any kind will be tolerated in the new unions created by the Party. They will be ruthlessly attacked whether right or wrong, even if the Party has to split the new unions wide open. This is part of its general policy to wipe out all opposition instead of trying to win over the opposition to its policy. This was clear to me in the Belleville convention when the first 20 delegates walked out in protest against the bureaucratic and incorrect policy of the C. P. (all speeches, no discussion, etc.)

I repeat, this was a spontaneous rank and file revolt. It was beginning to look very bad from the Stalinite line. Somebody would be blamed for the revolt. Let's make it Watt and thereby save a spanking by Stalin. Fine. Typewriter gets busy. Out comes a resolution against Watt. The second walkout was in protest against the action on Watt. I believe that if the first walkout of delegates had not occurred, the resolution against Watt would never have been read. The rank and file revolt became the "real danger" in the convention and someone had to be blamed in order for the Stalinites to save their own hides.

To the convention the credentials committee reported that 16,000 members were represented. In the committee's deliberations, they figured 8,000 members and if we cut this last figure in half we will come pretty close to the actual membership of the N. M. U. in Illinois. The delegates that revolted represented the strongest section of the union—Staunton-Livingston-Mt. Olive-Springfield section, the membership of which is close to half the total of the N. M. U. in Illinois.

The Daily Worker Lies Like Hell!

A Letter Sent by the Staunton Miners' Conference to the Poison Pen Artists

The following self-explanatory letter has been sent to the Daily Worker for publication:

Nov. 9—"Watt, without authority from anyone, came to Staunton."
Nov. 9—"Slinger, the man who built organization in Staunton."

Nov. 9—"Watt is trying to establish splitters headquarters."
Nov. 7—"Telegrams received at Staunton, condemning Watt's action."
Nov. 8—"Watt issues convention call."
Nov. 9—"Watt built up a little machine in Staunton."

While these excerpts do not cover all the accusations placed against Watt and the Staunton members, they are those of the most importance and I insist that they be printed in your publication with the accompanying explanatory letter.

In order to give you the true facts, it will be necessary for me to revert to the Belleville National Miners convention. While that convention was heralded as a rank and file convention, the outcome proved just the opposite. It is true that a number of delegates left the convention hall, and some among that number, were men who helped organize the old United Mine Workers many years ago. These men left the hall, not because of the influence of President Watt, as some seem to believe, but for the reason that they possessed sufficient intelligence to think for themselves. In other words, it was a spontaneous uprising against the wrong political propaganda. They had come to the convention for the purpose of building a rank and file union and nothing else. To prove my assertion, the convention had been in session almost two days, practically no sion from the rank and file was heard, only speeches and more speeches. All for a purpose. But of little or no interest to the membership.

The proceedings of the convention plainly show that business that would ordinarily require days of discussion were accomplished in the last few hours. The reports show that all resolutions were adopted unanimously. Surely some opposition would appear under ordinary circumstances. I have attended many labor conventions in the past, and must admit, some were machine controlled, but the Belleville convention was unrivaled in efficiency.

While I realize that the Daily Worker represents the aims and objects of the N. M. U. leadership, however, if these aims are correct, then surely it is not necessary to publish false and slanderous statements against individuals. President Watt is accused of establishing splitters headquarters, not by the rank and file, as your paper tries to show, but by a certain group who seems to imagine that it possesses super-intelligence.

Everyone who dares to differ with it is called an opportunist. I might say that every delegate from Staunton local, without exception, reported unfavorably towards the Belleville convention. After the reports a resolution was unanimously adopted, condemning the actions employed at said convention. You say, "the rank and file will fight to oust President Watt." The writer of this article attended every session held by the Staunton local, but failed to see this materialize although he does see the Staunton local all but wrecked, due to what took place at Staunton.

Daily Worker Falsehoods

At the Sub-District Conference held in Staunton, Sunday Nov. 10th I read the following, which appeared in your paper issued Nov. 6th. "Livingston local bars renegade Watt and his henchmen, etc." After reading the article, I asked every delegate from Livingston if that were a fact. Every delegate stated that it was not, and that Watt had not been barred by their local.

Under date of Nov. 7 issue—"Telegrams received at Staunton condemning Watt." By whom were these telegrams received? I have had charge of all official documents of this local since its inception, and can say without fear of contradiction, I have neither received nor seen such telegrams.

Issue of Nov. 8th—"Watt issues convention call." This again proves to be a fabrication, as the convention call was issued under instructions of the Sub-District Conference Committee.

Issue of Nov. 9th—"Watt built up a little machine in Staunton." In answering that accusation I shall say, Watt did not build up a machine, but he did help to build the strongest and most active local in the N. M. U. Yes, he did more! Besides doing splendid work in other sections, he was the main factor which caused Livingston as well as Pocahontas locals, to grow with tremendous rapidity. In the same issue you say, "Watt without authority from anyone came to Staunton. Another falsehood. The records of the Sub-District Conference Committee plainly show that Watt at various times was ordered to come to Staunton to address meetings in his vicinity. I might further state that this Sub-District Conference Committee is a committee composed of miners elected from their respective locals. A real body of the rank and file. In the same issue you say, "Slinger, the man who built organization in Staunton." It is unpleasant to cast any reflections upon Slinger as I well understand that he must make a record, if he expects to remain a member of the C. E. C. of the Communist Party. However as far as Slinger was concerned he is a negligible factor in Staunton, as his presence here is far from welcome. I could continue to expose many more malicious lies, which were circulated thru your press as well as other sources, but that will not build a Rank and File union. A retraction and the publishing of this letter will do much towards creating a solidarity among the miners, which is absolutely necessary if the National Miners Union expects to succeed. I hope you will give this matter the same publicity as you gave the misleading statements.

LETTERS FROM THE MILITANTS

THE BELLEVILLE CONFERENCE St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Comrades:

The recent Belleville convention of the National Miners Union for the state of Illinois has created a very sharp and serious situation.

The Daily Worker for October 28 claims that there were 110 delegates at this convention. First they had a general gabfest and bombastic predictions as to what was done in the textile fields and the clothing industry throughout the South and Eastern states, and also of the greatest forward step, etc., that the working class of America (led by the great Stalinists) had taken in launching the T. U. U. L. in Cleveland. Practically all the long speeches had the tone and make-up of Party phrases used in all of the Communist conventions that the red, red revolution was right around the corner. The rank and file on the second day of the convention was so sick of hearing these speeches that they demanded that they be stopped and that some practical plans for organizing the miners be discussed, that a report on the strength of the miners of Illinois and throughout the country be made, and also to discuss plans for calling a strike etc.

All the window dressing of a Communist convention was present on the stage with a constant stream of runners delivering caucus mandates to members on the stage and on the floor. The trouble began when the Party gave the floor to John Watt, president of the N. M. U. Watt started to ask why he never had the floor sooner.

He called for a showdown and wanted them to present charges against him if anything was wrong. Then the fireworks began over again. More wonderful speeches followed: Right Wing, Left Wing, Centrist groups, Trotskyism, Lovestoneism, socialist fakery, Hapgood, Howat, MacDonald, Fishwick, Lewis, Green, Woll, the coming world war, the Russian Revolution, and the general parade of the balance. What this meant to the 40 or 50 non-Party rank and file delegates was summed up by them in a motion to close debate and cut out this damned foolishness and get to work building the N. M. U. The big-hearted and fair-minded chairman, Voyzey, after granting the floor to at least 20 Party members, also joined in the demand to close debate. John Watt was given exactly 7 minutes to answer all the other speakers and that was not all the chairman did: he ruled that it was only fair that Pat Toohy should close debate after Watt's speech with also 7 minutes.

Watt took the floor and bitterly attacked the national committee for their wrong policy. Then up spoke the well-known Lovestoneite, Toohy, who toured through the tame regions of Illinois, but was kept out of the West Frankfort sub-district where he would have been exposed to the terrorism of the reactionary forces and meet the same fate as Corbushly and Allard, who were beaten up and shot at. He took the floor and tried to show up Watt and ended with reading a letter sent by Watt. Before he could finish, Freeman

Thompson made a point of order by stating that if this was read other things would be brought in and urged that it should not be read. It so happens that Thompson is lined up with the present Stalinist machine and here was too good a chance for Toohy to pass up. Toohy knew that Thompson and Watt were in Ohio together when this scab company union of coal miners was supposed to be organized and that the dues collected by the company would be turned over to the N. M. U. It was not until this letter was to be presented for the purpose of showing up what kind of a leader Watt was, that Thompson stepped in and wanted it kept quiet. Why? Because Thompson is the man responsible for the conditions laid down in collecting dues from this scab union. He reported this to Watt and Watt referred it to the national committee for advice. So Pat Toohy read this letter to the convention.

Watt was never given a chance to answer. After Toohy spoke a motion was put through to refer this case to the national committee of the N. M. U. for a hearing. The vote on this motion was 63 for and 47 against. It carried. Then a large number of these delegates rose and walked out of the hall. Watt was accused by Foster that he lead the walkout from the hall, but that was either a mistake or a deliberate lie on Foster's part, for I personally sat 15 feet away from Watt when Foster spoke and Watt was not 12 feet from Foster all the time he spoke.

After Foster's speech we realized that a mistake had been made by the Party in handing these non-Party delegates and that the situation had developed to the point of a split. Watt, Angelo, Goldberg, Payer, Morgan and myself got together immediately and started to round up these delegates and took as many as we could to a room where we invited Foster to talk to the delegates. The delegates refused to go back to the convention hall. Then it was up to us to use our influence to get them to overlook these mistakes and have them remain and work in the N. M. U. and carry on the work of organizing the miners into the union and prepare their forces for the impending strike.

After hours of discussion this was finally agreed to by all the delegates present. Another thing: Watt, Angelo and Morgan played a big part in winning these workers over to our viewpoint and if Watt or the others are accused of leading a split, that is a damned lie for they and our group did more than Foster could do. We succeeded in reaching 30 delegates of the 40 or so that walked out of the convention and in preventing a split in the union.

The Communist League of America (Opposition) fully understood the role played by the Party and was thereby in a position to take over the situation, try to correct these mistakes and lead the miners forward to the next steps in the struggle. Preparations are being made to hold sub-district conferences as a means of organizing the rank and file miners into the National Miners Union and for the liquidation of the United Mine Workers of America throughout the state of Illinois. We will continue to carry on our work in the unions and fight the policy of the Communist Party whenever their policies are wrong. This fight developed as a result of the belief that no non-Party worker can be an official of the N. M. U. and if there is, he must be removed at all costs even if it leads to a split in those working class organizations.

PARTY PROGRESS IN BOSTON Boston, Mass.

Dear Comrades:

You may be interested to know about the progress of the Communist Party in District One. I can give you a little information about the chaos in our district. As you know, the most active comrades in the District Committee here for the last few years have been Zeims, Louis Marks, and Bail, with Bail as District Organizer. Now Louis Marks and Bail are expelled from the Party and Zeims is removed from the District Committee. It may be said: There is a Party... without a District Committee.

Last night, November 9 there were seven comrades on trial for not being loyal to the Party—Duboff, Mary Schainis, and others. The result will be known in a few days. The Jewish District Committee has been dismissed because there is no one in the district to be the organizer for the Jewish section, for the Jewish organizer, I. Kutisker, has been removed from office for not being loyal to the Party and a committee of three has been "elected" out of incompetents to be the rulers of the Jewish section.

There was no one in Boston to be the chairman of the meeting to celebrate the 12th anniversary of the Russian Revolution and a comrade was brought from near Worcester to be the chairman of the meeting! (At the 13th anniversary celebration a chairman will have to be brought from New York, no doubt.) Quite clearly, the Party is progressing!!!

AMTHER'S SHOP BULLETINS Youngstown, Ohio

Dear Comrade:

Enclosed you will find postal order for five dollars from Comrade Parinos and five from me.

Whenever you are on a speaking tour up this way we will try to arrange a meeting here if such is possible.

The official crowd have given out many copies of the Red Ingot at the mills around here and the Daily Worker has carried some articles supposed to be from a Worker Correspondent, a mill worker.

Every one of the workers could see at first glance that the writer of the Ingot and the Daily Worker articles dealing with these mills were one and the same and that he, whoever he may be, knew nothing of what he was talking about.

It was obvious to us all that the writer was one who was never yet on the wrong side of a mill, which is the inside. But what is not obvious, what we cannot for the life of us understand is what he hoped to accomplish by such gross misrepresentation and idiotic exaggeration.

This, I think, shows that it is possible for a guy to wear corduroy, smoke a cheap pipe and yet not be a mill worker either physically or psychologically. But what can one expect from Lovestone's former man Friday of Ohio.

With comradely greetings, I am yours for a Weekly Militant.

CHARLIE BRYNE

STALINIST DESTRUCTION Chicago, Ill.

Dear Comrades:

There sure have been some interesting developments in the Illinois coal fields; also in the Party's attitude in the Chicago cleaners strike of which you will get the details soon. The Party has gone plumb crazy or maybe I don't understand the 9th period. Bill Foster is the craziest one of all—worse than Amter (Impossible!—Ed.) Looks like they are about to throw overboard, lock, stock and barrel, all the positions and advantages we have won in the past ten years by our many sacrifices and hard fought battle. If a change is not made or if we cannot rise to the occasion, all seems lost and the movement will have to be placed in the position of starting all over again at the beginning with Communism discredited in the eyes of the masses.

The comrades have arranged another party and dance for The Militant. The last one was quite a success financially and otherwise and this one is expected to be even better. A sub-getting campaign is also being prepared.

With Communist greetings and confidence in the success of our forthcoming Weekly, I am,

Fraternally yours,
JOHN MIHELIC

The Twelfth Anniversary

an nucleus will need a leadership. It will be able to lead it only in the Communist way, completed in the struggle.

We approach this thirteenth year as determined, prepared, calm, but we approach it without the slightest pessimism.

The principle of the proletarian dictatorship has entered army into history. It has shown the formidable power of a young revolutionary class directed by a Party that knows what it wants and how to combine its will with the march of objective development.

The twelve years that have passed by have shown that the working class even of a backward country can not only dispense with bankers, landlords and capitalists, but that it is capable of giving industry a much more rapid development than it knew under the domination of the exploiters.

These twelve years have shown that an economy centralized according to a plan is far superior to capitalist anarchy.

All these conquests, all these lessons, all these examples, remain unshakably fixed. They have entered forever into the consciousness and the practise of the world's working class.

We repent nothing and we renounce nothing. We live with the ideas and the state of mind that animated us during the days of October, 1917. Through the temporary difficulties we can see ahead of us. Strong though the windings of the river may be the river flows toward the ocean. Constantinople, October 17, 1929
