
Socialist Party Wins Primary Contest in All But Few Districts: Manhattan and Bronx Boroughs Carried Completely by Regular Organization Candidates — Several Brooklyn Assembly and Aldermanic Divisions Lost to Opponents

Published in The New York Call, vol. 12, no. 247 (Sept. 4, 1919), pp. 1, 4.

In the primary elections yesterday [Tuesday, Sept. 2, 1919], the Socialist Party emerged victorious from the contests forced upon it by the Left Wing in Manhattan, Brooklyn, and the Bronx. So far as the three boroughs were concerned, the Socialist Party carried the field, for especially where the Left Wing had concentrated its efforts it was badly defeated. In the districts where the Left Wing candidates won by narrow margins, it is believed that recounts will change the results.

In Brooklyn there were contests between the party and the Left Wing in every constituency. The Left Wing candidate for the Supreme Court judgeship, Louis B. Boudin, won his victory being attributed to the fact that the party's candidate, Joseph Kooperman, had to have his name written in.

In Manhattan and the Bronx the Socialist Party candidates triumphed without exception over the Left Wingers.

Louis Waldman won the nomination from Louis Lifshitz, a Left Wing nominee for the 8th Assembly District, by a vote of 76 to 24.

Lee Wins Nomination.

In the 8th Aldermanic District, Algernon Lee, the Socialist Party candidate, beat Carl Brodsky by a vote of 60 to 51, while Jacob Axelrad, for the party, beat Rose Spanier, a Left Winger, by the same ratio.

In the contest for the three 2nd Municipal Court judgeships, each of the three party candidates received about 230 votes, while the Left Wing candidate, Fannie Horovitz, received only 44 votes.

Party Wins in Bronx.

The Socialist Party candidates won the two Assembly districts in the Bronx in which the Left Wing contested the nomination. In the 5th District, Marion H. Laing polled 130 votes, while Louis A. Greene, Left Wing candidate, polled only 30. In the 7th District, Edmund Seidel, for the party, polled 54 and Belle Robbins, his opponent, 3.

In spite of the advantages which the Left Wing in Brooklyn enjoyed over the Socialist Party, it suffered a district defeat. In that borough the Left Wing had control of the old party headquarters and enjoyed the use of the party machinery, while the party was driven to build up anew.

The vote in that borough, however, was 1,000 for the party and 600 for the Left Wing.

Following is the detailed vote in Brooklyn. The Left Wing candidate is listed first and the party nominees second:
