Restoration of Money
With the introduction of the New Economic Policy and the gradual re-establishment of free exchange, money as a medium of exchange became indispensable. But the whole process of return to normal conditions lasted over two years, during which several attempts were made to escape recourse to right of free internal trade and the reconstruction of economic enterprise, both public and private, on a business basis, brought book a general system of money payments. A decree of August 5th, 1921, made money payment obligatory for all supplies from or services by State enterprises. Herewith went naturally the restoration of taxation, which took the form of an income tax and excises on wine, tobacco, coffee, and such usual sources of restoration of taxacton, when took the form to an uncome servicine.
