Democratic-Republican Solidarity Laid Bare By Expose of Coolidge Deal

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, another flash of light streaks across the dark places in Wall Street's government in Washington, showing how the dollar dictatorship operates.

The rampaging Senator Blease, of South Carolina,

The rampaging Senator islase, of South Carolina, kicked up another foul-smelling old party dunghill when he exposed the fact that the republican president, Coolidge, had ontered into a "deal" with the democratic senator. Underwood, of Alabama, to pad the Interstate Commerce Commission, that is making discriminating freight rates in favor of the non-union coal miners of the south, with some more actionaries.

The revelations should give another body blow to the pet "balance of power" theories, not only of the LaFollette-reactionary farmers' bloc in congress, but also of the official-dom of the American Federation of Labor, which makes it the basis of its "non-partisan" policy inherited from the regime of Sam Compers.

Coolidge definitely develops his plan of winning, not only the unity of his own party in congress, but of allying with his power all available democrats. The present exposure shows how places of prestige are used to win over susceptible democrats in this case Underwood, perennial presidential possibility on the democratic ticket. Coolidge uses this added strength, as has been repeately shown, to beat his own insurging party members in congress into line.

The case now in the linelight is typical. Two places are open on the powerful interstate commerce commission. The senate in its last session held up the confirmation of Thomas L. Woodlock, of New York, but Coolidge, nevertheless, gave him a recess appointment. It must now come up for approval. Coolidge still sticks by Woodlock. In order to have his appointment confirmed, Coolidge calls Senator Underwood to the White House and asks that he fill the other vacancy, thus winning democratic support.

Underwood does not resent this approach. He does not adapt the confirmed of the properties of deferson and Jackson. All party pride is laid aside. He grabs at the opportunity to get his man on the l. C. C. He suggested Richard V. Taylor, of Mobile, in his home state, and the suggestion is accepted. Taylor is mayor of Mobile, just as "open shop" as other industrial centers of the solid south. For nearly a quarter of a century he was manager of the Mobile and Ohio railroad. Cities in the reactionary south know where oget their mayors, and when Coolidge picks one of them for a job under his republican administration, he knows it is difficult to find anyone more conservative.

for a job under his republican administration, he knows it is difficult to find anyone more conservative. Thus the republican-democratic compact in congress grows. The 'balance of power' theory is based on the sup-position that republicans and democrats are opposed to each other, and that a small bloc can exercise influence by swing-ing its vote back and forth between them. The A. F. of L. "non-partisan" idea is also based on the idea that its bloc of "friends" can exercise influence in the same way. Coolidge is effectually shattering that fond dream. Underwood may is effectually shattering that fond dream. Underwood may indignantly deny the latest "deal" with Coolidge. But there it stands.

With these dreams of a short cut to power effectively shattered, labor will be able to build on a firmer foundation in the creation of its own class strength. Against all fruitless maneuvers within the old parties, the building of the class labor party.

Propaganda for Dawes Plan

The press of the United States has for weeks been carrying stories purporting to describe the economic conditions in Germany. An analysis of the reports reveals the most astonishing falsification. According to these reports Germany is steadily rising from the ruins of the world war and its aftermath that sen, the mark crashing to

of the world war and its aftermath that sent the mark crashing to such low levels that it became utterly worthless.

As a matter of fact the Dawes plan for Germany, which was an Inventory of the industrial resources of the country and a survey of the degree of exploitation that could be imposed upon German labor, had the effect when the first heavy loans were floated of slightly reviring industry. But no sooner was the plan made operative than the inherent contradictions of capitalism showed that the Dawes plan itself would produce a serious European crisis.

paga thesit wound produced serious caraptenic crisis. England participated in the Dawes plan because she hoped that if Germany were forced to pay enormous sums to the debtor nations she could not sell her industrial products low enough to compete with British industry. The United States wanted to review German in dustry so that country would furnish a place for investments of bank Whereas Britain utilized the scheme with one object, the capital. Whereas Britain utilized the scheme with one object, the United States had an opposing motive.

Even the temporary revival in Germany weakened British in-dustry. Furthermore any type in the realm of economics knows that the productive capacity of the industries of the world is more than adequate to supply the markets of the world and that if German in-dustry is revived and brought back to the basis of 1914 it will create a crisis in industry exercises.

May find no we have this exaggeration of the effectiveness of the Daws plan? On the one hand the capitalist press speaks of the revival of Ger-many while deplering the pathetic condition of France. Some pub-ications actually compare the condition of the two countries and arrive at the conclusion that a similar plan should be imposed upon France. And a Daws plan for France is the sun and substance of the propagatod in favor of the Dawse plan in Germany.

the propaganda in favor of the Dawes plan in Germany. Finance capital in the United States ever strives to find new spheres of investment, otherwise it will snother under its own ac-cumulation. But when it seeks places of investment it wants to create condition most favorable to 16eff. The one fact to be kept in mind is that England and the United States are the two great contend-ing imperialist powers. Wall Street strives to crush Reitain. This can only be achieved by creating powerful allies in Europe. If the appear of the control of the control of the control of the upon France, it will be handled by the United Steep data is imposed partial and acquisits Reitain. American bank cardial now dominat speak reases; it we enabled by the times states anone, without British and against Britain. American bank capital, now dominate ing Germany, will soon dominate France, then under the aegis of bank capital can be brought about, what France failed to accomplish by military might—the consolidation of one industrial unit em bracing the iron of Loraine and the coal and coke of the Ruhr.
