We most of us know that life, for the worker, in the various fascist countries, is pretty much Hell on earth. Not so many of us realize that in times of war the worker's life in even the countries known as democracies is equally cruel. By studying what has happened to the people in Canada, England and France, since September 1, 1939, we can all get a fair idea of what would be in store for us in the United States the day M-Day strikes.

The New York Post has carried recently a series of articles on what war has meant to our neighbors in Canada. It is interesting to note that the Canadian authorities have stopped the sale of the New York Post containing these articles. We quote from one of the articles:

Suppose, for instance, you were a bank clerk or bookkeeper living in Toronto and working regularly for a fixed salary. What difference would the war have made in your life?

First of all, you would be paying more money for almost everything you buy.

The cost of food went up 9.1% in November. The cnly food items still unaffected by the war are milk and vinegar, according to the Labor Ministry.

Fuel and clothing are up around 4% . . . You would pay 52c a pound for coffee which sells for 23 to 25c in New York City. Your electric and gas bills would be exactly 8% higher than they were before the war. Your clothing would cost at least 4% more. Every time you bought any of the hundreds of things Canada imports from the United States, your bill would be at least 10% higher.

Old East High School Building Seen as Possible Labor Temple

Hopes for a Minneapolis Labor Temple were revived this week when it was learned that Roy Weir, organizer for the Central Labor Uinon and member of the Minneapolis school board, has proposed that the Minneapolis Labor Trade Association reach an agreement with the school board whereby the trade union movement would gain title to old East high school, at 4th street and Central avenue southeast.

The school board is looking for a piece of downtown property upon which to erect an administration building. The Labor Temple Association owns an extremely desirable location at 4th avenue south and 7th street, and it is possible that an agreement may be made to exchange the two properties.

Behind the 544 Suit

(Last week, in chapter one of the series on the background of the book suit against Local 544, we revealed the gains made by organized labor in Minneapolis since 1934, and the economic stake the organized employers have in destroying trade unionism in this city. This week we take our readers through the stages of the book suit, from the day it was filed in February, 1938, recording how the local and national trade union movement has defended Local 544 at every stage of the suit, and why this suit is important to organized labor and to all workers.)

The plaintiffs filed suit against Local 544 on February 16, 1938.

At exactly the same time, the organized employ-ers of Minneapolis, who had finally deserted their discredited name of Citizens Alliance and had taken the new name of Associated Industries, launched a drive to raise a war fund of $315,000 to finance an ambitious anti-union program. This campaign was luanched in the name of the newly-created Minneapolis Civic Council under the leadership of O. J. Arnold, financier and open shopper.

On February 23rd the Minneapolis Central Labor Union voted unanimously to retain counsel to be associated with Local 544 attorneys in defending the General Drivers Union. Addressing the Central Labor Union on the suit, C. Warde Clarke, accountant for many unions, declared: "The books of Local 544 are among the best I have seen."

On February 25th the Minneapolis Labor Review wrote that "The unfounded charges against Local 544 are an attack not only on every union in the city but on every member of organized labor.'

Early in March the General Drivers Union filed a detailed answer to the finks' suit.

Early in April the plaintiffs' attorney, Arthur Anderson, filed a motion in District Court, asking Judge Reed to give him and plaintiffs immediate access to all the union's records. "We cannot prepare our case without examining the union's records," said Anderson, an admission that he and the plaintiffs had no real facts upon which to base their suit. A few days later the Minneapolis Teamsters Joint Council, through its attorney, interposed a complaint in intervention on the grounds that as the appellate tribunal of Local 544, it should have been approached by the plaintiffs before they applied to the courts. The complaint was allowed to stand, over the objections of the finks. At a citywide labor rally held April 8th in the Minneapolis auditorium, Roy Weir, organizer for the Central Labor Union, revealed that a Mr. Gallaway of the National Manufacturers Association had just been in Minneapolis to aid in the formation of a group of company or independent unions. This revelation only further convinced the Minneapolis union movement that the employers were responsible for the formation of the Associated Independent Unions, and were financing the suit against the General Drivers Union.

was finally held before Judge Reed from April 26 to April 30. The hearing was inconclusive, the court ordering the union to submit a written brief by May 20. The plaintiffs were to have until June 10 to file an answer. Late Wednesday night, July 27, 1938, Judge

Reed issued his decision: He ordered Local 544 to turn everything-correspondence, membership lists, executive board minutes, grievance committee minutes, etc .- over to the attorney and accountants for the five finks.

If the bosses thought the labor movement would take such a decision lying down, they received a rude jolt.

After consulting with unionists and attorneys. the Executive Board of Local 544 issued a five-thousand-word statement attacking Reed's court order. The executive board of the Minneapolis Teamsters Joint Council met and pledged its backing in the fight against the court decision. The Minneapolis Board of Business Agents rallied to defend the General Drivers Union.

The Central Labor Union unanimously adopted a statement pledging full support to Local 544 in its fight against the fink suit. The CLU's statement

"Speaking for the entire trade union movement of Minneapolis, and with the assurance that we voice the attitude of the entire trade union movement of Minneapolis, we declare that Judge Reed's order to Local 544 to open all its records to a group of spies and agents of employers is perhaps the most vicious decision made by a judge against labor in many years. For Minnesota, Judge Reed's decision is absolutely without

"If Judge Reed's order prevails, it sets a precedent whereby the worst enemies of organized labor will have access to the records of the labor movement. Not a union in Minnesota, not a union in the country, will be safe from invasion by its enemies. Not merely an occasional, disgruntled member, but open and avowed agents of reaction, will be enabled to peruse the confidential files of the trade unions and make their searches available to labor's irreconcilable ene-

'Organized labor stands in complete and wholehearted solidarity with Local 544 in its fight against this outrageous precedent."

Here Are the Draft Notices Ready for 10 Million of Us

When the United States government declares war, some 10,000,-000 young men between the ages of 21 and 31 will be registered for the first draft in accordance with the Selective Service Act which Congress would pass immediately.

Between three and four million of these men will be placed in Class I, liable for immediate induction into military service. The following form (S. S. Form 150) is already prepared in the state capitol of each of the 48 states, ready to bring us the news:

ORDER OF INDUCTION INTO MILITARY SERVICE OF THE UNITED STATES

THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

(Order Number) (Serial No.) GREETING: Having submitted yourself to a Local Board composed of your neighbors for the purpose of determining the capacity in which you can best serve the United States in the present emergency, you are hereby notified that you have now been selected for immediate military service. You will, therefore, report to the Local Board named above at velope. Through a complicated might well think Hitler had al-

(The term "military" shall comprehend both Army and Navy, including Marine Corps, except where such construction would be unreasonable.)

S.S. Form 150-Order of Induction into Military Service of the United States.

(Reverse Side) IMPORTANT INFORMATION TO ALL MEN SELECTED FOR MILITARY SERVICE AND ORDERED TO REPORT TO A

LOCAL BOARD FOR MILITARY SERVICE The day and hour specified on the Classification Record of this Local Board, and on the order and notice of induction into military service contained in this notice for you to report to this Local Board for military service is the time that marks the change in your status from civil to military.

Failure to report promptly at the hour and on the day named a grave military offense for which you may be court-martialed. Wilful failure to report with an intent to evade military service constitutes desertion, which, in time of war, is a capital offense.

Upon reporting to your Local Board, you will not need, and you should not bring with you, anything except hand baggage. You will not be permitted to take trunks or boxes with you on the train. You should take only the following articles: A pair of strong comfortable shoes; not to exceed four extra suits of underclothing; not to exceed six extra pairs of black or tan socks; four face and two bath towels; a comb, a brush, a toothbrush, soap, tooth powder, razor, and shaving soap. It will add to your comfort to bring one woolen blanket, preferably of dark or neutral color. This blanket should be tightly rolled, the ends of the roll should be securely bound together and the loop of the blanket roll thus formed slung from your left shoulder to your right hip.

You should wear rough strong clothing and a flannel shirt, preferably an olive-drab shirt of the kind issued to soldiers.

so many important angles of the book suit and what it means to organized labor, that we publish several excerpts from it. The full statement was published in the August 4, 1938, issue of the Northwest Organizer, and in the labor and employers' press of

"We have no hesitation whatsoever in throwing open our records to the tribunals of organized labor, Local 544 began. "So far as our financial records are concerned, these have been regularly audited, both by accountants for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and by a reputable firm of public accountants. What we object to is to permitting enemies of labor to have access to our records. That is the issue involved in Judge Reed's order. Our stand is backed by the Teamsters Joint Council, and by the Minneapolis Central Labor Union. In the ensuing fight we have the aid and counsel of our superior body, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. We merely continue the glorious tradition of the trade union movement, that labor and labor alone shall have access to the records of the labor movement.

Tie-up Between Finks and Fascists "What Judge Reed has done is to order us to surrender our innermost secrets to men who do not deny their membership in the 'Associated Council of Independent Unions,' an open enemy of all unionism, an employer-financed organization whose open tie with fascist gangster bands was clearly revealed on Friday night, July 29, at the Silver Shirts' meeting in Ark Hall. At this meeting, closed to the public, the 'independent union' organization, by arrangement with the Silver Shirt leaders, approached each participant and provided him with literature inviting him to join the 'independent union,' while the Silver Shirt speakers called upon their listeners to organize

What Is at Stake "If Judge Reed's order is permitted to stand unchallenged, it means that any group of reactionary looses has only to plant a few stool pigeons in a union; when they are exposed, have them institute suit against the union for an accounting of funds; and then the court will give the stool pigeons' attorneys access, not only to the financial accounts, but to every written record of the union.

armed bands to raid the headquarters of Local 544...

"Every union man everywhere will immediately understand what a deadly blow to unionism would be dealt by this process. Others, friendly to labor but unfamiliar with union problems, may easily be given an understanding of the situation. By the very nature of their function, unions are engaged in conflict, now quiescent, now sharp, with the employers from whom they are seeking better wages and working conditions. In this struggle, both sides have to solve various problems of strategy and tactics, and no union could be long successful whose strategical and tactical decisions were known to the opposing employers. The minutes of the Executive Board of a strong union are worth tens of thousands of collars to the hostile employers. Even such an apparently duplicable item as the membership mailing list, possession of which can have such manifold uses, would ordinarily be an enormous task even for the most powerful employers' agency; whereas by the court's order these stool pigeons can photograph this as well as every other kind of record kept by the union. These facts are too obvious to require extended state-

"In a word: A union has the same objection its documents. to permitting the enemy to scrutinize its documents. plans, books, etc., as does the United States Government have to a potential enemy scrutinizing its industrial and military resources and plans . . . Labor Has Always Guarded Its Secrets "In its long fight for the freedom to organize, not the least of labor's tribulations has been the struggle against courts which join with finks to deny

On the National

In France all the labor legislation won by the trade unions in the last decade has been wiped off the books. The 40-hour week won by the general strike of 1936 is a thing of the past. By a decree issued November 15, 1939. working hours are increased to 72 hours, with a maximum of 14 hours a day. For women and children, the limit is set at 60 hours per week and 10 hours per day.

But the lengthening of the work day doesn't mean a larger pay enoutbreak of war.

Strikes are outlawed. Workers can gain a revision of wages only by government decree. The shop steward system, backbone of effective unionism, has been abolished. In many large factories, the union stewards were simply arrested and shipped up to the front.

are being arrested and imprisoned. Thirty-one writers of international reputation have been placed under arrest even for mild pacifism. Arrests of militant workers mount Picket Line into the thousands. No less than 30,000 German and Austrian refugees from Hitlerism are interned in French concentration camps.

> Active French trade unionists are being arrested right at their places of work in Paris. In the Lorraine factory, for instance, the cops have been picking active unionists off one by one, taking them away in their work clothes. Hardly any labor papers are today permitted to appear in France. Those that do appear are the house-broken organs, and even these are heavily censored. . . .

Indeed, the French worker pay for 60 hours of work that he taken over most of the abominable received for 40 hours before the methods of Hitler. It is hard to see how the French workers could be any worse off under Hitler than they are under Daladier.

> "I suppose I must admit I have my faults," said the husband in a tone far from humble.

"Yes," replied the wife, "and in your opinion your faults are better than other folks' virtues." When a great many people are unable to find work, unemploy-American pacifists will be inter- ment. results .- Calvin... Coolidge, sted in learning what is happen- when a columnist at $4 a word.

unions the right to rid themselves of stool pigeons and to guard the secrets of the organization. The right of unions to constitute tribunals of the organization which shall hear complaints is a time-honored right which unions have fiercely fought for and won. So much so, that it has become the settled law of the land that no union members or alleged member can resort to the courts until he has first exhausted the tribunals of the organization. These tribunals are one of labor's proudest possessions, for in them justice is meted out with regard to facts and the essence of the matters, and with little regard to the technicalities and tricks of lawyers and courts.

"As was pointed out to Judge Reed, union constitutions and by-laws are written by laymen for laymen, and to do not deal with every detail, but lay out broad principles and procedures. In addition to what is actually said in any union's laws, the right to resort to trial, first within the local union, then an appeal to the joint council of the such unions in the locality, or to appeal directly from the local union membership's decision to the international union, is a right as fundamental as the union itself. Agents of reactionary employers, naturally seeking to curtail the power of unions and to subordinate them to the courts, have consistently sought to avoid recourse to the tribunals of the organization, and have been aided in this maneuver by judges who, while con-ceding the settled law of the land, find 'exceptions to the rule.'

"The plaintiffs in this case made no attempt to appeal to the Local 544 membership meeting, or to the Teamsters Joint Council, or to the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. Judge Reed has justified them in this plain violation of union tradition and the rule of law and, astoundingly enough, has justified them mainly by ignoring the actual text of the Constitution of the International Brotherhood of

"Judge Reed is, by implication, conscious of the weapons he is potentially making available to the enemies of labor, for he says in his decision: 'The purpose of said inspection (of the union's documents) is to give plaintiffs an opportunity to prepare for the trial of the issues and any information gained during the course of said inspection shall be used for no other purpose.' Recall, however, that the judge allows the plaintiffs to 'make notes thereof and to copy the same or any parts thereof or to take photographs thereof.' How does the judge propose to guarantee to the union membership that this material, copied or photographed, will not find its way to the files of the Associated Industries? The attorney who is to handle the inspection and the accountant he is to employ-what assurance does the judge have that they will not provide this material to labor's enemies? Nor is there any way of tracing to them the information they might turn over to the Associated Industries so that even were the judge by punishing them, to seek to guarantee to us the inviolability of our plans of action and our union secrets, he could not do so . . .

"Gigantic concentrations of capital are seeking destruction of our union. Tens of thousands are monthly spent to encompass this end. For destruction or defeat of the Minneapolis labor movement would be worth millions upon millions of dollars in wage cuts. Judge Reed's decision has provided these sinister forces with a weapon perfectly adequate for their purpose. The issues are clear: Every laboring man, every friend of labor will understand that, in fighting back against the attack on the life of the union, Local 544 is fighting the battle of the labor movement everywhere."

With the support of organized labor in this area, Local 544, after loosing this blast against Reed's decision, appealed the case to the State Supreme Court. On October 6, 1938, the state court reviewed Judge Reed's decision. The court heard arguments from both the union's and the finks' attorneys, and announced it would reserve its decision to a later

On November 25, 1938, the state supreme court referred Reed's order back to the district court, pointing out that the order was of a "blanket nature" and that Local 544 had the right to ask that the order be modified.

For one reason or another numerous delays followed, and it was not until January 2, 1940, that the case finally came up before Judge Carroll in district court, with results now known to all our readers. In the face of the mountain of evidence, old and new, that the plaintiffs were hostile to Local 544 and members of a dual and hostile organization, Judge Carroll followed in the footsteps of Reed and decided against unionism and in favor of the finks.
