

Played by Pressmen's Union

President David Simons

Are you going to listen to a sub-editor, asked President Simons of the Pressmen's Union, Local No. 23, when he was asked to sign a petition to allow the union to appear on the stage at the local meeting, had been known to the pressmen by the name of a 'kiss'.

Who is General Joseph Haller? Up to 1918 Haller had been unknown in the United States by means of a campaign entitled many thousands of country men realize that the military forces all over the world, regardless of nationality are united to suppress them. Only when they realize this can they acquire the understanding to defend their rights and to march forward in order to shape a new world out of the old one.

Lithuanian Support Campaign. The call of the Workers Party for the creation of a $100,000 fund as a preliminary step for establishment of the Daily Worker found prompt response among the Lithuanian workers of this country. With the Communists in the lead, all progressive forces are at work. Not only branches of the Workers Party are 'donating' money, but various other organizations, as for instance, American Lithuanians, Lithuanian Progressive Women's Alliance, even bridge societies stand in the front of this campaign.

The Chicago comrades stand in the lead. Works Party Branch No. 1, already donated $200, but its goal is $500. Branch No. 4 has nearly $100, with the decision to collect $200. Members of Branch No. 41 are working for the creation of $300. Lithuania's Marcus Cheras made an application for six shares. Nineteen comrades of Lithuania Women's Alliance bought five shares. Various other organizations are doing their best to strengthen the drive for 'The Daily Worker'.

From the 'Smokes and Steel' City (Pittsburgh), Workers Party Branch No. 4 gave $25. Detroit comrades sent $48 and other cities promised to do their best. The Lithuanian Lithuanian comrades will be made known to the Workers Party.

Boston Police Get Aid of Black Band in Stopping Labor Meeting

By WILLIAM EDWARDS.
(Special to the Worker.)
BOSTON, Mass.—Police officers surrounded the city when they closed a meeting held by the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, at the home of Mrs. E. J. Kelly, 100 North Street, on Saturday night.

The Ukrainian 'band' led the list of some 200 persons, including the police that a meeting was to be held at the home of Mrs. E. J. Kelly, 100 North Street, on Saturday night.

An Answer to "Justice" Baroff, Sigman and Yanovsky

By WILLIAM E. FOSTER.
When I was in New York recently to speak at the great protest meeting of needle workers, held in Rutgers Park, I took occasion to reply orally in detail to the standers against me contained in the current issue of 'Justice', and replied specifically to the three questions asked by Mr. Yanovsky. Now, let me (being just returned to town) reply in writing.

Mr. Yanovsky, by turning a few lines of the 'Justice' issue, has made a public meeting at Rutgers Park, New York City, on Saturday night, the 11th of September, 1923, at the home of Mrs. E. J. Kelly, 100 North Street, New York City.

Mr. Yanovsky demanded an answer to his nine questions. I have furnished such an answer, first orally and now in writing. We demand that the 'Justice' issue be corrected. If it is not accepted, all the signatures of Mr. Yanovsky will not prevent the proper conclusion from being drawn.

Now to answer the nine questions. The first of them are either insolent or trivial or both, and are not worthy of answer. But as they are asked, they have no right to be asked. The only one of importance is the question of the $100,000 fund for the strike fund and received a resolution from me for $50,000. He wonders where the additional $50,000 came from, leaving the conclusion that there were some irregularities in my opinion.

As to the question of the $100,000 fund for the strike fund and received a resolution from me for $50,000. He wonders where the additional $50,000 came from, leaving the conclusion that there were some irregularities in my opinion.

Our Programless Progressives

The reactionaries are clearing the decks for 1934. With the help they are busily at work charting their course for the coming national elections.

Coolidge's campaign managers are taking advantage of the few months respite they still have before Congress opens in December. Secretary of Agriculture, Wallace, has been sent on the road to the disaffected areas of the Northwest. Wallace, very discreetly kept quiet about the past and Harding. The reactionaries of the black belt are turned to the future. The Secretary of Agriculture is talking about subsidies to farmers about price-fixing schemes for the wheat market, and about taking the farmers into the inner councils of the Administration.

At the same time Coolidge is seeking to disarm the progressives of another section of the political front. He has dropped the dis-honored policy pursued by Harding of denying the La Follette followers patronage. Coolidge has decided to swing the La Follette vote. He has dropped the attempt to draw them closer to the "regulus" fold. Now the followers of La Follette in the House and Senate will be permitted to hand out "pork" to their own agents. The practical politicians around Coolidge feel that the war-like attitude of the reactionaries has not yielded them any results and that, this new outbreak of generosity on their part may not get them anything like the "pork" they think they are entitled to. At some of the bitterness that Harding's old practice has been considered will disappear, according to Coolidge's managers.

La Follette himself is supplying the soft, sweet words to Coolidge the so-called "progressive" leader. He has discarded Harding's faith of normalcy. Coolidge has drifted into a new program. From now on the country will be piloted to "stability." Political handbooks will be re-written in line with this new key-note of which the reactionaries themselves are the authors. While all this feverish preparation is going on in the camp of the reactionaries, the progressives seem to be programless. Politicians, their leaders, has not yet returned. When he left for Europe last summer, he did not know what his plans were. The renewed efforts of the reactionaries to cement the La Follette organization. It will be interesting to note how long the progressives are going to drift. The question now is: Will they have the courage to carry the fight to their reactionary opponents, or will they waver and surrender at the decisive moment as they have often done in the past.

The progressive action in a highly strategic position in Congress. Now they have a better chance than they ever had before. Price-fixing pools for wheat won't fool the farmers, whose condition is growing more desperate. The Republican candidate in the recent Washington state election showed that the temper of the dissatisfied farmers has not changed. La Follette and his followers now have the opportunity of their life to show if there is any real progressivism in them. The only way the progressive can prove that there is something more voluminous than their ranks is by definitely assuming the initiative in their fight with the reactionaries. Coolidge and by breaking completely with the "old guard" of the G. O. P.

Castor-Oil Constitutionalism

Of all the benefits of the victory of Allied imperialism in the World War two advantages have stood out most prominently in the propaganda columns of the international financial overlords. These two most valuable advantages are the preservation of constitutional democracy and the organization of the League of Nations.

But the whole history of European politics since the conclusion of the World War has been only a series of failures and defeats for both constitutionalism as peddled by the imperialist plutocrats and the League of Nations as baptized by Woodrow Wilson and run by Robert Cecil. The spread of Fascism, which is an open repudiation of even the faintest pretense of capitalist constitutionalism, shows quite forcefully that the democracy at stake in the world struggle is being rapidly despite its victory. First, we had the Fascist revolution with its attendant impotence of the "people's" Chamber of Deputies in the victorious Kingdom of Italy. Then one of the "little" Allies, Greece, came along with its own petty vest-pocket edition of Fascism. We were next treated to the assassination of Stambouliak and the rise of the Fascist military dictatorship in languished Bulgaria. And now we have another mortal blow dealt at democracy by the brazen overthrow of constitutional government and the setting up of a government by a Fascist military dictatorship in neutral Spain.

And the poor mummified League of Nations! One might blame the League of Nations for the history of its failure, but it rather smacks of financial justice to find that it was left to the Fascist Government of Italy to throw the last shovelful of earth on the grave of the League of Nations. Italy's outright, unaccommodated disregard of the League and its Council of Ambassadors and other High Priests of world peace in the Corfu and Plume crises can mean only that the time has already arrived when even the mere empty talk about the League of Nations is wearing thin.

Ready for the Next War

We are assured by none other than Col. Dwight F. Davis, Assistant Secretary of War, that the United States is prepared for the next war. Col. Davis says this with considerable pride. During his direction of the mobilization of industry, more than 700,000 industries have been cataloged by the war department as possible sources of supplies. All is ready in the American department of the world human slaughter house.

First, we had the Fascist revolution with its attendant impotence of the "people's" Chamber of Deputies in the victorious Kingdom of Italy. Then one of the "little" Allies, Greece, came along with its own petty vest-pocket edition of Fascism. We were next treated to the assassination of Stambouliak and the rise of the Fascist military dictatorship in languished Bulgaria. And now we have another mortal blow dealt at democracy by the brazen overthrow of constitutional government and the setting up of a government by a Fascist military dictatorship in neutral Spain.

And the poor mummified League of Nations! One might blame the League of Nations for the history of its failure, but it rather smacks of financial justice to find that it was left to the Fascist Government of Italy to throw the last shovelful of earth on the grave of the League of Nations. Italy's outright, unaccommodated disregard of the League and its Council of Ambassadors and other High Priests of world peace in the Corfu and Plume crises can mean only that the time has already arrived when even the mere empty talk about the League of Nations is wearing thin.

The reactionaries are clearing the decks for 1934. With the help they are busily at work charting their course for the coming national elections.

Coolidge's campaign managers are taking advantage of the few months respite they still have before Congress opens in December. Secretary of Agriculture, Wallace, has been sent on the road to the disaffected areas of the Northwest. Wallace, very discreetly kept quiet about the past and Harding. The reactionaries of the black belt are turned to the future. The Secretary of Agriculture is talking about subsidies to farmers about price-fixing schemes for the wheat market, and about taking the farmers into the inner councils of the Administration.

At the same time Coolidge is seeking to disarm the progressives of another section of the political front. He has dropped the dis-honored policy pursued by Harding of denying the La Follette followers patronage. Coolidge has decided to swing the La Follette vote. He has dropped the attempt to draw them closer to the "regulus" fold. Now the followers of La Follette in the House and Senate will be permitted to hand out "pork" to their own agents. The practical politicians around Coolidge feel that the war-like attitude of the reactionaries has not yielded them any results and that, this new outbreak of generosity on their part may not get them anything like the "pork" they think they are entitled to. At some of the bitterness that Harding's old practice has been considered will disappear, according to Coolidge's managers.

La Follette himself is supplying the soft, sweet words to Coolidge the so-called "progressive" leader. He has discarded Harding's faith of normalcy. Coolidge has drifted into a new program. From now on the country will be piloted to "stability." Political handbooks will be re-written in line with this new key-note of which the reactionaries themselves are the authors. While all this feverish preparation is going on in the camp of the reactionaries, the progressives seem to be programless. Politicians, their leaders, has not yet returned. When he left for Europe last summer, he did not know what his plans were. The renewed efforts of the reactionaries to cement the La Follette organization. It will be interesting to note how long the progressives are going to drift. The question now is: Will they have the courage to carry the fight to their reactionary opponents, or will they waver and surrender at the decisive moment as they have often done in the past.

The progressive action in a highly strategic position in Congress. Now they have a better chance than they ever had before. Price-fixing pools for wheat won't fool the farmers, whose condition is growing more desperate. The Republican candidate in the recent Washington state election showed that the temper of the dissatisfied farmers has not changed. La Follette and his followers now have the opportunity of their life to show if there is any real progressivism in them. The only way the progressive can prove that there is something more voluminous than their ranks is by definitely assuming the initiative in their fight with the reactionaries. Coolidge and by breaking completely with the "old guard" of the G. O. P.

Castor-Oil Constitutionalism

Of all the benefits of the victory of Allied imperialism in the World War two advantages have stood out most prominently in the propaganda columns of the international financial overlords. These two most valuable advantages are the preservation of constitutional democracy and the organization of the League of Nations.

But the whole history of European politics since the conclusion of the World War has been only a series of failures and defeats for both constitutionalism as peddled by the imperialist plutocrats and the League of Nations as baptized by Woodrow Wilson and run by Robert Cecil. The spread of Fascism, which is an open repudiation of even the faintest pretense of capitalist constitutionalism, shows quite forcefully that the democracy at stake in the world struggle is being rapidly despite its victory. First, we had the Fascist revolution with its attendant impotence of the "people's" Chamber of Deputies in the victorious Kingdom of Italy. Then one of the "little" Allies, Greece, came along with its own petty vest-pocket edition of Fascism. We were next treated to the assassination of Stambouliak and the rise of the Fascist military dictatorship in languished Bulgaria. Zimoviev on the German Revolution; Letter on 9th International Youth Day

By GREGORY ZIMOVIEV

The International Day of Youth is of special significance this year. A new, severe storm is approaching. The German working class in brewing tremendous struggles. It is a long time since we have felt so near to the revolutionary struggle as we are now. The German working class is fighting for their lives—the quintessence of the international proletariat, the basic force of the international proletarian revolution is entering the arena.

The new struggles of the working class in Germany can assume such proportions that they will be in a position to bring about for us the beginning of the Socialist era in one of the most important parts of the world.

There is no power on earth which could vanquish the twenty million workers of Germany. The German working class cannot conquer the bourgeoisie. There is no power on earth which could vanquish the twenty million workers of Germany. The German working class cannot conquer the bourgeoisie.

It is one of the greatest misfortunes of the working class of the various countries, one might conclude that the working class cannot conquer the bourgeoisie. There is no power on earth which could vanquish the twenty million workers of Germany. The German working class cannot conquer the bourgeoisie.

For the Workers' and Farmers' Government, New Slogan of the Communist International

Workers—in this space each week—the Communist International has published a new installment of a detailed report on the proceedings of the recently enlarged executive committee meeting of the Communist International. This week's installment discusses the development and progress of the slogan of the "Workers' and Farmers' Government." This week's installment will deal with "Fascism, the Immediate Menace."

The bourgeoisie is determined to place the whole burden of the war debt and the "reconstruction of Europe" on the backs of the workers. The workers must prepare not merely to enter into the struggle to secure victory and assume power, but to enter into the struggle to secure victory and assume power, but to enter into the struggle to secure victory and assume power.

The Workers' and Farmers' Government is a natural extension of the idea of the Workers' and Farmers' Government.
